FOREWORD

Since the sixty-fourth issue of the Index was published, a new policy has been introduced by our Academic Activities Board. This group has decided that the INDEX should feature the Seniors rather than the Juniors, as has been the custom in the past. As a result, the members of the class of 1934 are featured in two successive yearbooks. Therefore, in order to avoid the repetition of the individual photographs used last year, group pictures of the students in the various departments of the college have been used.

An effort has been made to record the events of the college year by picture and pen, in order to depict clearly the activities of our college life, and to present a faithful account of "another yesterday" at Massachusetts State College.

Hugh Potter Baker

THOSE really familiar with the development of the Massachusetts State College, up to the period of President Thatcher's resignation, were cognizant of the fact that it had entered a new era. With the marked increase in enrollment, new demands for expansion of curriculum and facilities would be made. These would have to be met fearlessly, yet wisely. This could only be done with a courageous and safe leader whom the students, the faculty, the alumni, the trustees, and the interested public could follow with confidence.

Hugh Potter Baker was selected and began his administration in February 1933. His ability as an executive met the first tests acceptably. He studied the college — its history, curriculum, faculty, and students, and then announced a sane policy from which neither radical nor conservative could dissent. "Our real objective at Massachusetts State is to continue the growth of a fine, clean, strong college where Massachusetts boys and girls can live a wholesome life in preparation for full and effective living. In concentrating on this objective we shall strive for a program in which culture shall be the foundation and vocational instruction the super-structure. In other words, we conceive it to be our opportunity and our obligation to graduate each year a few well educated people who shall be prepared to go out into life to live reasonably satisfactory and useful lives."

Though we are privileged to know Dr. Baker as an executive primarily, it is as an authority in the field of Forestry that he first attained recognition. Born in St. Croix Falls, Wisconsin, paternal descendant of Capt. Remember Baker of the "Green Mountain Boys" of Vermont, he early developed a fondness for the out-of-doors which quite naturally influenced him toward his first career — forestry. After receiving his Bachelor's degree at Michigan State College in 1901, and in 1904 his Master of Forestry from Yale University, he became Professor of Forestry at Iowa State College. From 1907-1912 he held a similar professorship at Pennsylvania State College. To this work he added ten years of practical experience as a member of the United States Forestry Service. Upon receiving the degree of Doctor of Economics at the University of Munich in 1910, he became Dean and Professor of Silviculture of the New York State College of Forestry at Syracuse. He resigned this position in 1920 to begin a career in business as Executive Secretary of the American Paper and Pulp Association. Eight years later we find him in the employ of the United States Chamber of Commerce. In 1929 he returned to the Deanship of the Forestry School at Syracuse University where he remained until he assumed the Presidency of Massachusetts State College.

Although President Baker has served the college only one year, his first annual report to the trustees shows a splendid record of achievement. Funds have been secured for much needed physical improvements on the campus from the C. W. A. and the P. W. A. as well for the building of a new library and men's dormitory. Firmly believing that the college and its aims should be better understood by the citizens of the state, he inaugurated a publicity program which should achieve this end. Through frequent addresses, to groups, radio talks, and personal correspondence, he has clarified the work and opportunities of the college. Another acute need was met when he organized a placement service for the graduates and needy students of the college. These accomplishments were the products of his unselfish devotion to and genuine faith in the growth of the college.

In Dr. Baker we find intimately blended the attributes of administrator and practical man of affairs. He knows, seemingly instinctively, what constitutes well organized and effective service and makes a genuine effort to recognize it. His many co-workers bear eloquent testimony to his marked ability to analyze difficult situations and obtain a satisfactory solution.

Fortunately the man is not lost in the official. Both he and Mrs. Baker are most cordial and friendly. He takes opportunity to associate with his student body, his faculty, and his friends, and the numerous invitations to his home are eagerly accepted by those who receive them. His hearty manner of greeting, his sturdy common sense, his high standards of integrity are apparent to all who know him. Moreover all these testify to his long hours at his desk, to his conscientious devotion to his work, and to his success as President.

IN MEMORIAM

Roscoe Wilfred Thatcher
1872-1933

Roscoe Wilfred Thatcher

SCIENTIST, educator, public servant, friend; how best can we record the loss of him whose life was so full of rich experiences and whose contributions to society encompassed such broad fields? It was only for six short years, the last six of his life, that he was associated with our College, and yet he has left a lasting impression upon the institution and a cherished memory in the hearts of those students, alumni and staff who knew him as 'Prexy'.

When Dr. Thatcher came to this College in 1927 as its tenth president, he was nationally recognized as a scientist. His achievements in the field of chemical and agronomic research had been outstanding and he was leaving the Directorship of one of the country's leading research organizations. Scientific research was always his beloved vocation to which he returned with joy when ill health made necessary the termination of his administrative duties.

Besides this scientific background, he brought to the presidency a thorough knowledge of the problems of education gained through years of experience as teacher, investigator, and administrator in three other Land-Grant Colleges. But more important still of all the fine qualities of the man were his broad vision, his kindliness, and his optimistic philosophy of life, which gave character and grace to his administration.

He was firm believer in the American system of public education from the primary school through college, and he frequently referred to the full program as the sixteen grades of the public school system. His own words were, "If there is any one thing that history teaches more clearly than any other, it is that general education of all the people is the best safeguard for the welfare of any country. Aristocracy in education is as dangerous to public welfare as is any other kind of aristocracy."

He was deeply religious and found no difficulty in reconciling science and religion. "Truths," he said, "cannot conflict. I believe it is more profitable to find harmony than discord between the truths of religion and the truths of science." He had faith in the ultimate supremacy of good, and, while he experienced much sorrow and discouragement in life, he attained an enviable happiness through his optimistic viewpoint.

It was fitting that his passing should be from the midst of his work in his laboratory. The evening before, he had attended a faculty party with the usual delight which came to him in the association with his friends. The transition was sudden and unheralded, yet it may well be suspected that he himself would have had it so. His loved ones and his friends were prostrate. From all over the nation came messages of condolence and grief. They referred to his great contributions to science, to the important new research project in which he was engaged, and they spoke unfailingly of his cherished friendship.

He did his work well and in his record our College may well be proud. Soon there will stand on the campus a beautiful new men's dormitory which for generations to come will be a memorial of our beloved leader, for the inscription which it will bear is "Thatcher Hall."

IN MEMORIAM

Charles Henry Patterson
1863-1933

IN MEMORIAM

Charles Henry Patterson

In that noble elegy, The Adonais, written in memory of the dead Keats, the poet Shelley sings:

"Life, like a dome of many-coloured glass,
Stains the white radiance of Eternity,
Until Death tramples it to fragments. — . . ."

For most of us, it is only in such shattering moments that we glimpse at all the mystery of existence, a glimpse, too, so fleeting, so evanescent that with its passing we are but the more sorely puzzled and can only murmur:

"We are such stuff
As dreams are made on, and our little life
Is rounded with a sleep."
Shakespeare, The Tempest, Act IV Sc. 1.

Now, we are confronting such a moment. A little less than a month and a half ago we were all stunned by the passing of Charles Henry Patterson, our colleague, our leader, our friend. But a few weeks ago and he was with us — able, prudent, genial, human; now we can only bring "frail tokens of love, and pay this inadequate tribute." Vergil, Book VI. This afternoon it is my purpose merely to try to put into words as truly as I can, a few of the things which I feel very deeply and very sincerely about my friend and your friend.

No one who ever knew Charles Patterson at all, could help being impressed with his immense love for literature, especially for our own English literature in which he was such a master. It was this great love and respect for the noble heritage of so many centuries of spiritual and literary fruitage in our English race, that led him to expect and demand nothing less than the best from every student, as so many of you can attest. The patience and the skill which he brought to bear in conducting and building up to its present state of abounding excellence the sophomore survey course in English literature — the largest and one of the most important fundamental courses given in our curriculum — will ever be a monument to his scholarship, his teaching skill, his fine absorption in those humane qualities that distinguish the field of letters, and a noble criterion in teaching which his successor will find it difficult, indeed, to emulate. How often in talking with me about this course did his enthusiasm for the great Elizabethan and Caroline masters of song show forth as he quoted some lyric from Drayton or Shakespeare or Ben Jonson; from Wither, Herrick, Waller, Suckling, or Lovelace! And I have wondered after hearing him read with such glow:

"I sent thee late a rosy wreath,
Not so much honouring thee,
As giving it a hope that there
It could not withered be.
But thou thereon didst only breathe,
And sent'st it back to me;
Since when it grows, and smells, I swear,
Not of itself, but thee."
Johnson, Song to Celia.

or

"I could not love thee, Dear, so much,
Loved I not honour more."
Lovelace, To Lucrecia on Going to the Wars.

or again with such whimsy:

"Whenas in silks my Julia goes
Then, then (methinks) how sweetly flows
The liquefaction of her clothes.

"Next, when I cast mine eyes and see
That brave vibration each way free;
O how that glittering taketh me!"

Herrick, Upon Julia's Clothes.

I have wondered, I say, upon such occasion how any of "our young barbarians, all at play" (Arnold) could be so thoroughly impervious, as I fear some have been, to the mood and the art of great lyric moments when rendered so perfectly by our friend. Of course, it was this understanding of and delight in such perfect lyric art that led to his appreciation for and love of the great Romantic poets — Keats and Byron, Rossetti and Swinburne.

But truly his greatest love, as you know, was found in the drama, in every period of which he was equally at home, from the tropes and interludes, miracle plays and moralities of the Middle Ages, down through the drama of Shakespeare and the great Elizabethans, through the heroic plays, so-called, of Dryden, through the scintillating comedies of the Restoration masters of wit and irony, down to the art of the late Dion Boucicault, whom he believed to be greatly underrated when not actually neglected by the present age, and of whose life and work Professor Patterson has left what is doubtless the most comprehensive and thoroughgoing study that has yet been made. I trust, Mr. President, if no other arrangement proves feasible, that somehow Massachusetts State College may find a way to make possible the publication of this critical biography of Dion Boucicault as a memorial to its author, who has done so much for the cause of drama in our college and in our community and some of whose earlier years were spent on the stage in support of such dramatic stars as Edwin Booth, Margaret Mather, and Otis Skinner. For me some of the happiest recollections of my friend will be found always in the fact that I was privileged to be a member of the cast he last directed; that I was also favored, as were some of you, in seeing him in his final and only public appearance as an actor in Amherst; and that especially do I find a serene comfort in remembering that I was with him and the intimate group who, early in the summer at the Court Square Theatre in Springfield, shared together the pleasure of witnessing what proved to be for him the last professional production he was destined to see.

But do not, my friends, conclude that all this fervent interest in and preoccupation with the emotions as the basis of great art ever led Charles Patterson to neglect or to underestimate reason as the rule of life. To such a comprehension of the rôle of reason in life may be attributed his ready understanding and mastery of the great thinkers of the Age of Reason — the eighteenth century — of Swift, Shaftesbury, Mandeville, Johnson, Hume, Gibbon, Burke, and Paine. There never has been, there is not now, nor is there ever likely to be on this faculty a more fearless, a more valiant, a more forthright exemplar of reason as the law of life than Charles Henry Patterson. For cults and the "cultish", for the esoteric, for the dark, for whatever savored of mystification or hocus-pocus, he was ever on guard and strove mightily to imbue his students likewise with a similar attitude of caution. As the Reverend Henry Ives in his funeral address so admirably brought out, our friend trusted reason implicitly as the law of life and never doubted that she would be justified of her children.

It is, however, as a friend that those of us who knew him best love to think of him. Never, never, shall I forget the fine consideration with which he stood by me in my time of trial less than two years ago, nor shall I fail to remember with what a solemn satisfaction I now recall our frequent conversations carried on in his flower garden, in which he so much delighted, this very June before he left for that Maine vacation from which he was not to return. His sterling sincerity, his genial humor, his consideration of others, his ability to sense and to understand their case as different from his own, his scrupulous fairness, his sportsmanship, his good fellowship—and what a good fellow he was!—these, all these qualities, and many more endear him forever to every one of us. With what poignancy they bring to us by their very absence now, the whole problem of human existence and the meaning of the great transition that every life, no matter how rich in joy and love, must sooner or later make. One moment we behold it fertile in experience, replete with meaning, great with the promise of much more still to be achieved; the next—silence and “the dreamless dust”. Man’s life, indeed, falls between the eternities; in verity, it is like unto the parable which the Venerable Bede more than ten centuries ago told of the sparrow driven in at one door of the great hall from the wild storm without and presently departing at another into the dark and wintry night from which it had emerged.

What more fitting word, then, in conclusion, can I utter than that spoken by the great humanist and interpreter of life, Shakespeare, whom our friend so well understood and so truly loved? Doubtless you all remember in the tragedy, Hamlet, how dear Hamlet was to Horatio; and at the end of the play when the dying Hamlet has closed his own account in this world with the words, “The rest is silence,” you recall with what noble feeling and language Horatio pronounces the final eulogy:

“Good night, sweet prince;
And flights of angels sing thee to thy rest!”

What more suitable utterance can I suggest at the final curtain of my friend and your friend.

“Good night, sweet prince;
And flights of angels sing thee to thy rest!”

WALTER E. PRINCE

THE HONOR SYSTEM

Address given at the Weekly Convocation of January 24, 1934.

Where the vision fails, the people perish. Where the ethical core of a highly concentrated society, such as is ours here at the State College, is threatened by disintegrative organisms, by corruption and gangrene, the whole of that society is threatened. Conversely, any measure calculated to protect and foster the soundness of this ethical core is to be eagerly welcomed.

The Honor System is one of the agencies which, at this College, is, for better or worse, a force affecting the moral core to which I have made reference. It has been, in the past, a great strengthening agency dignifying and elevating student life here on our campus, and fostering especially favorable relationships between students and members of the faculty. But it has been such largely by virtue of the fact that practically all of the students were unanimous in regarding themselves as loyal to the spirit of the student-gentleman, because with them the gentlemanly sentiments of self-respect and personal pride and fair play were not empty words to which lip service might be rendered in public, but active realities as real as the food that they ate, or the facts that they mastered in the classroom, the laboratory, or the library.

The result was that with students of this predominant view — for whom honesty, honor, pride, self-respect, and integrity were eagerly desired as ends making for deep-seated and glowing happiness — the Honor System was a profound Article of Faith, an objective expression of firm sentiments experienced right in their own hearts. It was one forthright affirmation of their more or less explicit realization that there can be a gratifying and sustaining beauty in a life of virtue, more to be sought after than beauty manifested in other ways.

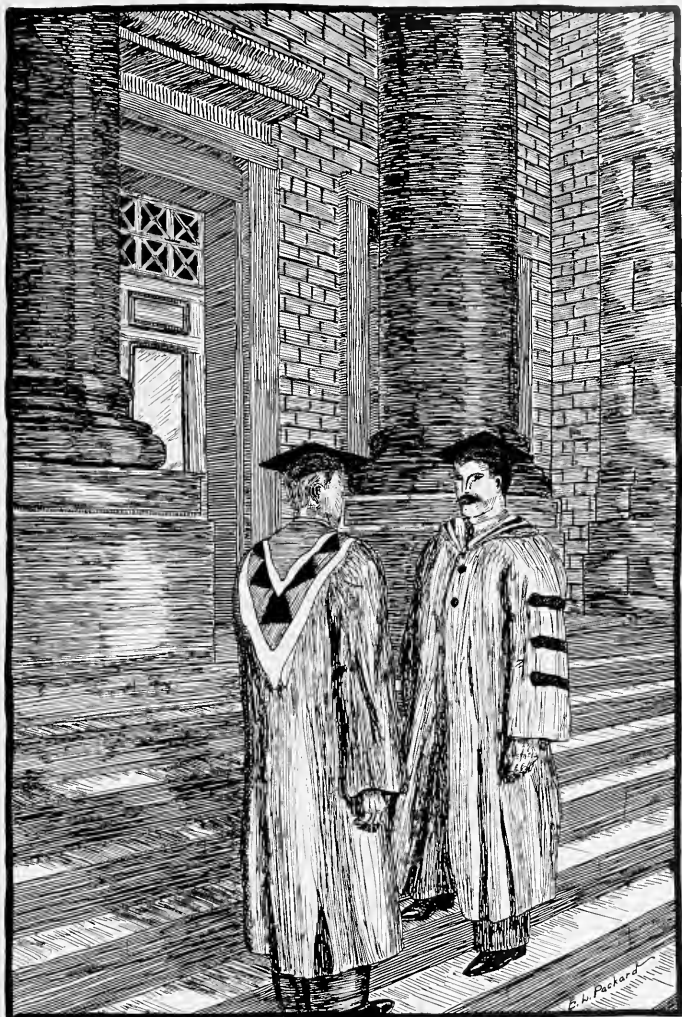

Students dominated by this central, though often unconsciously formulated view of experience, could not merely acquiesce passively to an institution like the Honor System. It meant too much to them. It was vitally concerned with one of the deepest aspects of their lives; hence it could not be a matter of indifference to them.

The very first question, then, that each one of you should ask yourself right now is whether or not you wish to continue toward the realization of this ideal. Are you so deeply stirred by it that it is a matter of vital importance to you? Are you stirred by it, not because loyalty to such an ideal will necessarily make for external success measured in terms of dollars and cents, but, on the contrary, because you share my conviction that only through a controlled and shaped life of integrity can you achieve anything like a condition of being happily and permanently at one with yourself, independent of changing circumstances? Your answer to this question is central. The Honor System, by its very name, assumes, presupposes, a society of gentlemen and gentlewomen. Honor is a virtue inextricably lashed to the code and the spirit of true gentility (note that I do not use the term genteelness, which is but the second-hand caricature of the spirit of gentility). It is absurd to talk of honor among those to whom that term has no virile and living connotation.

To conclude. If you vote against the Honor System, you say, "Members of the Faculty, we have looked within our hearts, and have found that for us the so-called ideal of the American student-gentleman is a beautiful, but impossible, figment of the imagination. We either feel that it is altogether empty and remote from us, and impossible of attainment even if we wanted it, or that it is not worth striving for at all. Practical expediency, with an eye always to the main chance, this is our ideal, and to this we dedicate ourselves.

"We feel, furthermore, that we are too weak-willed, too jelly-spined, to continue to accept these responsibilities that must be ours if we maintain the Honor System. We have not enough moral strength and maturity, and, though we realize that we are the victims of a fallacy of sentiment, we feel that we could never get ourselves to the point of reporting the cheat, — the self-designated common enemy of our corporate welfare. So we relinquish our privileges. We prefer the proctor system, with its quick meting out of punishment to the cheater, with its accompanying freedom of collective responsibility on our part, but with its atmosphere of tension as exerted between the proctors, and those who are being examined."

ANOTHER YESTERDAY

October 19, 1933. "Yesterdays at Massachusetts State College" by Professor Rand is published. It is a history of Massachusetts, but it is not only history, it is drama, romance — the more significant because it is true. It offers us a glimpse of those staunch characters of yesterday who have made possible what we have today. It is the timely presentation of a precious heritage which we must somehow carry on, an incentive, and this ringing command to us

"---- take up the task eternal and the burden, and the lesson,

"Pioneers, O Pioneers!"

June 1, 1934. Another yesterday has slipped into the past. Another chapter has been added to the history of our COLLEGE, another year to her life. We who have helped make this yesterday would have it go down on record as it really is — a continuation of the past, essentially the same, yet dotted here and there with incidents, plans, and aspirations which give to it a character of its own, progressive, yet true to old traditions; outstanding, yet typical of the days which have gone before. We, therefore, present this book as an Index of another yesterday at Massachusetts State College.

ON THE UNCERTAINTIES OF LIFE

To question, as a child with searching eyes
Exclaims in wonder of the lovely rose;
What mighty power lies hid in earth or skies,
From whence descends this lovely thing that grows?
To marvel, as a youth with cherished hopes
Exults triumphant in a well-earned name;
Who glories in the joy and grief of strife,
A guileless victim of the goddess Fame.
To ponder, as an old man bent with care
Seeks longingly for quietude and peace;
What happiness is left for him to share,
What fate ensues when life on earth shall cease?
Of Life we ask but these three things alone,
And find no answer save our humble own.

TRIBAL LEGEND

Eight and forty moons have risen,
Waxed and waned in endless splendor,
Since a band of braves and maidens —
Young, untried, but still most valiant
Of the tribes they left behind them —
Gathered for the hunting season,
Gathered near the shores of Hadley.
There the gently rising mountains, —
Norwottuck, Holyoke, Warner, Toby —
Lifting high their heads to heaven,
Gazed upon a goodly picture:
Verdant fields and wooded hillsides;
Flowing brooks and stately pine-trees;
Peaceful waters, ever bearing
Calm reflections of the tepees
Built around the waters' edges,
Shifting scenes of elms and willows,
Rippling stars and flowing moonlight:
Such was Massachusetts Aggie.

There they found a village ready,
Left intact by other peoples:
Wigwams, council-fires, and weapons,
Theirs to use and theirs to cherish.
Many older chiefs were waiting,
Ready, eager, to direct them,
Teach them ways of hunting, fishing,
Raising corn, and making wigwams,
Warfare, warwhoops, tribal dancing,
Legends of their people's people,
And the worship of their idols.
Nearby other tribes were scattered,
Older, wiser, skilled in hunting,
Friendly, ready to assist them —
All but one, which, not so friendly,
Hid in ambush, plotting warfare.

So in council-fire assembled
Chose they leaders to defend them:
Big chief Clow, and next, chief Goodhue,
Batstone, guardian of provisions,
Ashley, keeper of the records,
Jackson, teller of the legends,
Heap big war-chiefs, Blanchard, Blackburn.
Thirty-four became their symbol,
On their totem-poles depicted.

Warriors straightway were conducted
By the older settled Redskins
Through their own ancestral tepees;
(For the braves were all divided
Into bands, all tribes uniting,
Under bonds of pledged allegiance,
Under ties of close alliance.)
Thirty-four ere long decided
Where to smoke fraternal peace-pipes,
Where to pledge as loyal brothers.

Thirty-four had scarce assembled
When they heard the war-whoops sounding.
Thirty-three rushed in upon them,
Rushed into their council-chambers;
Made the warriors practice war-whoops
Loud and long each morn at sunrise;
Made the tribe, both braves and maidens,
Wear green feathers in their headbands
As the symbol of their weakness;
Made them carry tribal records,
Hop insignia in the foot-paths;
Made the maidens, pigtailed hanging,
File together to a skirmish,
With the tribe from near-by Amherst,
With the Amherst red-skinned warriors.
All this for a moon and longer.

Long before that moon was over
Time and place were set for battle.
Braves prepared with chants and warpaints;
Maidens came to stand hard by them;
All the wood was thick with Redskins.
Warwhoops sounded. Cries of "Razoo"
Filled the blackness of the evening,
(For the inter-tribal language
Termed the first important battle
"Razoo" — famed in tribal legends.)

In a clearing of the forest,
Brave met brave in bloody combat;
One by one with steadfast courage
Warriors faced a threatening Redskin;
One by one the matches ended,
Bringing glory to the stronger.
Now as victors, now as vanquished,
Thirty-four renewed their war-whoops,
Fought and struggled, fiercely, bravely,
Vanquished one by one the warriors
Thirty-three sent forth to meet them,
So that when the peace-cry sounded
Thirty-four emerged victorious!

Thirty-three was not yet willing
Thus to smoke their rivals' peace-pipe,
So they lay in ambush, waiting
For the passing of the warriors;
Dealt each one a blow so mighty
That it shoved him down the pathway,
Stumbling blindly down the pathway.

Once again they met in conflict
Robed in tribal war-dance costume,
Ere the East was red with morning.
Thirty-four, in triumph meeting,
Found themselves enclosed by enemies.
At a signal from the chieftain,
Brave met brave in lonely combat,
Dragged him back and forth in struggle,
Scalped him, robbed him of his feathers,

Tried to drag him to the wigwam,
To the guard-house for the vanquished.
Thirty-four, when peace was granted,
Found their wigwam filled with prisoners,
Filled with scalps and draggled feathers,
So that Redskins, hostile, friendly,
Named the tribe again victorious.

Thirty-three was not yet vanquished!
Once again these tribes assembled,
Drew up forces near the waters,
Sixty men, the bravest, strongest
From each tribe, in hostile manner,
Facing foes across the river.
Across and through the muddy waters
Writhed a rope — a hempen serpent.
At the shooting of an arrow
Warriors all laid hands upon it,
Heaved and tugged with all their manhood
Till at last one tribe was weakened;
Thirty-four, then all defeated,
Slipped and slid into the waters,
Through the muddy swirling waters,
While the victors, warwhoops sounding,
Raised aloft the rope in triumph.

One more great encounter followed.
Braves eleven, strong and fearless,
From each tribe in warfare meeting,
Met to battle long and bravely
In a war-game known as football,
Met to struggle with their foemen
For the capture of a trophy —
Just a bit of polished leather
From a wild boar torn and beaten —
Tried to kick or pass or carry
That inflated bit of pigskin
Down the field to safety regions.
Thirty-four, with Bush among them,
Rushed with vengeance on their rivals,
Overwhelmed them, drove them homeward,
Pressed with vigor toward the goal-line;
And the air was thick with shouting,
With the shouting and the warwhoops
From the tribe, now thrice victorious,
Over thirty-three, their enemy.

Meanwhile, all four tribes of Redskins
Harkened to the words of wisdom
Which their elders spake unto them,
Assimilated much of learning,
Grew in mind as well as body.
Some there were who would not listen,
Disregarded love of learning,
Seeking only joy and pleasure.
But at last, some three moons later,
Came a day of final reckoning:
Trembling squaws and doubting warriors
Had to show their elder chieftains

Worthiness of their encampment,
Ruggedness against their hardships,
Fitness both in mind and body.
Many squaws and many warriors,
Failing to uphold the standards,
Left their tribe and their companions,
Nevermore to meet as equals,
Nevermore to call them brothers.

Half a moon at length was granted
Free of cares and obligations,
Half a moon, which all the Redskins
Spent in their ancestral tepees,
Spent in song, and dance, and worship
Of the great and noble sun-god,
Spent in carefree happy freedom
Far away from their encampment.

Once again the summons sounded;
Thirty-four rolled up their blankets,
Reluctantly returned to Amherst,
Called the roll, but soon discovered
That their ranks were quite depleted.
At a secret consultation,
Once again they chose their leaders:
Clow and Goodhue, Ashley, Jackson;
Ryan, now as tribal trader,
Smith and Adams as the war-chiefs.

Warriors now were strangely treated
By their brothers, fellow tribesmen;
Made to stalk through virgin forest
While the sky was dark above them,
Made to wear outrageous raiment,
Made to suffer, mind and body,
Ere they knew them as their brothers,
Ere they called them worthy brothers.

Moons passed slowly, yet too quickly;
Thirty-four was now accepted
As the youngest of the warriors,
Youngest of the tribes of warriors
Living, learning, on the campus.
Freshmen — this their tribal title —
Sought for honors, sought for duties,
Listened in at council-meetings,
Made themselves a part of Aggie.
Final choice of tribal leaders
Gave them Clow and C. McMackin,
Gave them Ashley, Smith, and Ryan,
Gave them Thompson as a war-chief,
Gave them Jackson, legend-teller.

Great rejoicing filled the campus,
When the word was brought by tom-toms,
When the Redskins, war-whoops sounding,
Learned that old familiar "Aggie"
Now was simply "Massachusetts".

Ere the tribe began to scatter,
Ere they left their loved encampment,

Braves and squaws, attired in feathers,
Robed in gowns of ceremony,
Sought a private place of meeting,
Chose the distant council-chamber
In the great Hotel Northampton.
There they met in secret splendor,
Feasted long, and drank and jested,
Smoked the peace-pipe of contentment.
There their elder chief and teacher,
Friend of all the braves and maidens,
Heap big fire chief, Father Serex,
Spoke to them in words of wisdom,
Ere they gathered in formation
For their final dance of triumph,
For their celebrated war-dance.

Shortly ere the tribes disbanded
Came the formal dedication
Of the newly-finished tepee,
Dedicated to the training
Of the braves, of the encampment,
Training in all types of warfare,
Training them in rugged fulness,
In their strength and their endurance,
Such a wigwam as was worthy
Of the braves of Massachusetts.

Thirty-four returned to Amherst;
(Three short moons had departed;)
Greeted fellow braves and maidens,
Chose once more their tribal leaders:
Edmund Clow again as chieftain;
Next in power — chief McMackin,
Tribal scribe — squaw Harriette Jackson;
Lucey, Smith, as tribal war-chiefs;
Teller of the legend — Campbell;
Ryan, re-elected trader.
Sophomores, they called each other,
Represented on the campus
By their braves — Maroon Kev holders;
Dunphy, Noble, Clark, the chieftains,
Clow and Ryan, Hiland, Alton,
Sturtevant, and C. McMackin.

Warwhoops sounded, war-cries echoed;
Thirty-four gave out the challenge:
Thirty-five young braves and maidens,
Latest comers to the campus,
Rallied to the call to battle,
Drew up forces, met the foeman,
Overwhelmed him with their numbers,
Scalped him, robbed him of his weapons,
Overcame him during "Razoo";
Dragged him, stumbling, through the campus,
Choking, eating dust and feathers,
At the hard-fought, six-brave rope-pull;
Dragged him, struggling, to the tepees,
Robbed him of his war-dance costume,
Meted out defeat inglorious
In the costumed war-dance conflict;

Only once their rivals rallied:
Thirty-four came through victorious
In a basketball encounter,
In a five-brave test of prowess.

Though the powerful freshmen warriors
Overcame their rival tribesmen,
Still the sophomores were stronger:
Older, longer on the campus,
Many braves held seats of honor,
Many squaws received high honors.
Bush, upon the field of battle,
Struggled bravely for his Redskins,
Helped to bring them fame and glory
In the contest with their rivals —
Nearby Amherst, deadly rivals —
Brought defeat upon those warriors,
Vanquished them on field of battle.
Other braves and other maidens
Vied in varied fields of valor,
Some in song, or dance, or story,
Some in campfire entertainment;
Many braves went out to warfare,
On the courts, in track, and baseball.
Leaders of these rising Redskins:
Clow, McMackin, Jackson, Ryan,
Campbell, teller of the legend,
Warchiefs, changing their positions,
Lucey, Smith, Taft, Burr, and Coburn.

Three persistent groups of maidens,
After waiting, waiting, waiting,
Finally received permission
From their elder chiefs and chieftains
To regard themselves as sisters:
Sigma Beta Chi, the first one,
Alpha Lambda Mu, and Lambda
Delta Mu, the two remaining.
Soon another joined the council,
Called itself by name, Phi Zeta.
These four bands of faithful sisters,
Maids from all three upper sections,
Pledged in sisterhood devoted,
Modeled after bands of warriors,
Faced a hard but glamorous future.

Thirty-four, their power growing,
Twice conducted tribal dances,
One by their official leaders,
By their braves — Maroon Key wearers;
One in honor of the seniors,
As a farewell to the seniors,
Thirty-two, their braves and maidens,
Ere the tribes in haste departed,
For their far ancestral tepees.

Thirty-four returned as juniors:
Took up seats of greatest honor;
Full-fledged leaders of the campus.
Clow again they chose as chieftain,
Clark as sub-chief, Taft a war-chief;

Jackson, Ryan, Lucey, Campbell;
Only once a change was voted:
Second chief they named McMackin.
Bush again, among the gridsters,
Piled up endless scores of honors,
Gained a title, well-deserving,
Leading scorer of the nation,
While the warriors, strong and mighty,
Overcame their ancient foemen,
Once defeated — Bowdoin, victor;
Once unsettled — Tufts, the enemy;
Seven times they were victorious,
Seven times the braves were victors.
Chief among the tribal dances,
Chief of all the ceremonies,
Came the Prom — a formal war-dance;
Red-skinned warriors, long expectant,
Maidens garbed in robes of splendor,
Gathered for a nightly vigil,
Celebrated long together.

Thirty-four, before departing,
Wrote a full and splendid record,
Wrote a comprehensive record,
In their log-book — called the "Index",
Wrote in there for every Red-skin —
Fellow tribesmen, younger warriors,
Wrote it there for all to witness,
Filled it full of picture-language,
Telling of their high achievements,
Telling of their tribal honors.
This they left behind in honor
As they left their loved encampment,
Left it for the summer season.

Thirty moons and six had ended
Since the tribe had first assembled,
Thirty-four, her braves and maidens,
On the Massachusetts campus.
Now for three moons all had scattered,
But when the fourth was high in heaven,
Then the tribe once more assembled,
Happy in their last reunion;
Gladly greeted fellow tribesmen,
Heard their tales, their wars, achievements;
Sadly, too, for each remembered
But a few moons were before them
Ere they leave this loved encampment;
Leave their tepees, trails, and trophies,
Leave them to the younger tribesmen,
Leave their fellow braves and maidens,
And return to distant valleys.

And our tribe of noble seniors,
Facing happily the future,
Joyous with their fellow Redskins,
Found their hearts quite over-shadowed
By the passing of their chieftain,
By his passing in the summer
To the happy hunting regions;

Patterson, their well-loved chieftain,
Lover, and the chief of teachers
Of the songs and of the legends
Handed down for generations;
So they joined in silent tribute
With the other tribes and Redskins
As chief Prince, his friend and brother,
Spoke with words of admiration
Of the man they knew and honored.

Thirty-four, now stately seniors,
Leaders now through all the campus,
Gathered once again together
For the naming of their chieftains;
Big chief Clow, their foremost leader,
First elected tribal chieftain
When these Redskins were but freshmen,
Chief of thirty-four since thirty,
Once again was highly honored,
Re-elected to his office;
Next in power came chief Hiland,
Tribal scribe again — squaw Jackson;
Ryan, guardian of the store-house
Since the days he was a freshman,
Chose they once more for that duty;
Smith as captain, heap big war chief,
Lucey also as a war chief,
Campbell still as legend teller.

Famed of tribal ceremonies
Came the great inauguration,
Came the public installation
Of the chief of the encampment,
Big chief Baker, mighty father.
Thirty-four, in tribal costume,
In the tribal robes of seniors,
Marched sedately through the campus;
All the tribes stood by to see them,
Came to see the big procession;
Watched the ranks of stately scholars,
Watched the seniors proudly passing,
Saw their friend and past chief, Thatcher,
Saw their newly-chosen chieftain,
Gazed upon the noble Ely,
Chief of Massachusetts Redskins,
Gazed upon those dignitaries,
Fourscore chiefs, in native costume,
Sent on terms of peace and friendship
From encampments near and distant,
Sent to bring them tribal greetings.
Long and brilliant the procession,
Long the ceremony following;
Noble speeches were presented
By his excellency Governor Ely,
By the chiefs Smith, Graves, and Machmer,
By the newly chosen chieftain,
By the tribes of younger Redskins
Through their spokesman, Alvan Ryan;
Ryan, speaking for his tribesmen,

Serious, earnest, in his manner,
In his ardent aspirations,
In his firm beliefs and tributes,
Well-deserved the words of honor
Spoken by his friends and elders.

Thirty-four, returned as seniors,
Found their tribe a great deal smaller
Than in freshman days of battle.
Many could not stand the hardships,
Could not stand the stress of training,
Left the tribe and its encampment.
Others, vastly more successful,
Found their way to other Redskins:
Four enrolled at Tufts encampment,
Still as seniors of State College,
Learning there the art of medicine,
Planning to become witch doctors;
Bourgeois, Wyman, were the warriors,
Duckering, Tiffany, the maidens.

Twelve from all the many seniors,
Leaders, winners of high honors,
Twelve, and only twelve, were honored
By election by their elders,
By their teachers and their chieftains
To a tribe of braves and maidens,
Honorary tribe for scholars:
Mary Taylor, Ruth D. Campbell,
Only maids to be thus honored;
Bates and Caird, among the warriors,
Randall Cole, and Coombs, and Frigard,
Hoffman, Denmark, Alvan Ryan,
Ted Cooke, Jr., and Kozlowski.
Some moons later French was chosen
As a member of the order.
Greatest honors were divided
For the two of highest standing:
Mary Taylor, Hyman Denmark;
And as all were named and honored
All the tribes stood by in tribute.

Great rejoicing filled the campus
When announcement reached the Redskins
That at last would be presented
Two new wigwams: one to shelter
Freshmen warriors, called in honor
Of the late chief, Roscoe Thatcher,
"Thatcher Hall", to be erected
Opposite the squaws' headquarters,
Opposite their house, the "Abbey",
On the hillside, facing westward,
Facing Warner and the Abbey.
For the use of tribal records,
Legends, papers, songs, and pictures,
Would be raised a second wigwam,
Named "Goodell" for that past chieftain.
Thus was their encampment growing.

Seniors — eldest of the whole encampment,
Leaders throughout all the campus:

Thirty-four now gave their noblest,
 Gave their best and last endeavors
 In the fields of their attainments.
 Tribal records were depicted
 For the eyes of all the Redskins,
 By the hands of big chief Royal,
 By squaw Campbell, brave Seperski,
 By Burns Robbins, Snowdon Thomas,
 In the widely-spread Collegian,
 With braves Talbot, Schenck, and Batstone
 Ably keeping it in motion.
 In the tribal warfare contests,
 Bush was chief of all the gridsters;
 Smith and Frigard, Mountain, Lojko,
 Sievers, Sibson, Bigelow, Coburn,
 Ryan, Burke, and Norman Griswold;
 These from thirty-four were chosen,
 Fought against their old-time rivals,
 Conquered Bowdoin, Conn., and Worcester,
 Rensselaer, then Rhode Island,
 Lost to Amherst, local rival,
 Lost to Tufts, and to Saint Anselm's.
 Captain Cowing, chief of soccer,
 Captain Caird, cross-country runner,
 Leading many sturdy warriors,
 Winning honors for his tribesmen.
 Captain Lojko, with his teammates,
 Conquered each and every rival,
 Overcame their twelve assailers,
 Won an undefeated season,
 On the courts, o'er all victorious.
 Then in campfire entertainment
 Maid McCarthy, warrior Southworth,
 Chief of Roister Doisters tribesmen,
 Gained a lasting reputation,
 Achieved acclaim and endless praises.
 Stephanson, an able warrior,
 Manager of Harvest field-day,
 Spread to all the neighboring Redskins,
 Spread the fame of his encampment.

So through all the wide-spread campus
 Thirty-four has placed her tribesmen,
 Left upon the tribes below her
 Never-ending signs of conquest,
 Left upon the whole encampment
 Something of her dauntless spirit,
 Something of her great successes,
 So that as her braves and maidens
 Bid farewell to fellow tribesmen,
 Teachers, friends, and able leaders,
 Bid farewell to Massachusetts,
 Seeking wider fields of battle,
 Then her spirit shall yet linger
 Living in the hearts of Redskins,
 Scattered wide, but not forgotten:
 Thirty-four, beloved Redskins,
 Loyal Sons of Massachusetts.

IN MEMORIAM

JOSEPH LOJKO 1911-1934

JOSEPH LOJKO, late member of the Senior Class, died at the age of twenty-two as the result of an automobile accident on April 27, 1934 in South Deerfield. He was born in Poland in 1911 and came to live in Northampton a few years later. He was graduated from the Northampton High School in 1929 and spent the following year there as a post-graduate. In 1930 he entered "State" and was to be graduated in June, 1934.

With his passing the Senior Class lost a most lovable and colorful member. In dress, walk, and speech, "Joe" was attractively individualistic. One was quickly impressed with his healthy and clean-cut appearance, which he was always mindful of maintaining.

As a friend, he was sincere, frank, and tactful, always ready to offer helpful criticism. His sense of humor was of the type which makes men congenial. The courage and daring spirit which so characterized his play were qualities which he was ever willing to offer for the support of a friend. "Joe's" spirit of fun and exuberance were extremely contagious, and there was never lack of excitement when he was around.

As a student, his thoroughness and enthusiasm were well known. Always able to concentrate to an exceptional degree, he could study while others were wasting time. He could see the goal while others were merely on the track. "Joe" was brave enough to ask questions until a topic was clear to him. Modesty marked his behavior in the class room as well as on the athletic field. Cooperative and willing to share his knowledge, he had an air of jaunty confidence.

As an athlete, "Joe" accepted the fact that he was handicapped in size, and compensated for this deficiency by using strategy and having at his control unusually well-developed fundamentals. His philosophy, "It's not what you do that counts, but rather, how you do it", found application in his athletic as well as his academic life. "Joe" was seldom the high scorer, but he drew attention by his sterling sportsmanship, his strong leadership, and his intelligent technique.

Indeed, we shall ever remember Joseph Lojko as a loyal friend, an exceptional scholar, a great athlete, but most of all, as an outstanding member of the class of 1934.

One half of our year at Tufts Medical School was spent with Anatomy, all day long from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. We often thought longingly of the well balanced variety of our classes at Massachusetts State. Of course, we had Microscopic Anatomy in the morning with the Gross in the afternoon, but after all Anatomy is Anatomy and we thought that we had plenty of it.

This semester there is Physiology instead — or, rather Physiology and Physiological Chemistry (which are all the same to us). We think of the warm spring days on the campus with the scent of new mown hay in the air and can hardly wait to be back.

However, despite all this, we have enjoyed our year at Tufts even more than we expected. Our life has not been a grind, as a disinterested observer might think, but has given us richer fields, a gay time, and pleasant memories.

1935 CLASS HISTORY

The largest freshman class in the history of the college; the first class to enter Massachusetts State College: that was 1935. She entered upon her four-year career with a name already charged with new responsibility and purpose. Significant of the new era into which her alma mater had stepped was her initiation — for she was the last of her line to be "oriented" to the campus by the rigorous hazing of the "good old days". Her members have vivid recollections of skull-caps and green berets; sunrise serenades and freshman "Bibles"; brilliant paper dunce-caps on the men, clothes backwards on the women, and the conscientious prompting of the vigilant sophomores on "hopping the nines".

Razoo Night — held for the first time in the cage of the new physical education building — gave her an opportunity to "get even". Though her co-eds had no active part in the clash, all were on hand to cheer their fellow classmates. Whether or not it was the cheering that did the trick we cannot say, but her men actually won both the events in the cage and the annual night-shirt parade. Still on a winning streak, they pulled the sophomores over the line in the six-men rope-pull some few weeks later, but because of illness on the campus, the sixty-man rope-pull title was left uncontested, and a tie in foot-ball and a defeat in basketball ended the struggles with the sophomores. An undefeated season in track helped her to earn a place for herself among the other classes.

While she was thus creditably carrying on those activities annually expected of freshmen, the class of 1935 gradually came to feel more at home on the campus, acquiring for herself academic and social standing, and laying foundations for future leadership and responsibility.

September, 1932, brought the class of '35 back to meet old friends and to fill those places in athletics and academics which she had made for herself the previous year. She found herself in close contact with her own freshman days, for the annual challenges with the freshman class still sounded. Thirty-five retained for herself the title of victor in the Razoo night clash, but later in the fall the sophomores waded through the pond with what grace they could on the end of a rope drawn by sixty victorious freshmen. Other games were played as usual with the freshmen, but with less of the "do or die" attitude, for the class had by this time acquired other interests.

The Maroon Key of the class of '35 will be remembered for Mardi Gras in the true spirit of this festive occasion, when ladies and gentlemen of the gay nineties exchanged dances with Hula Hulas in grass skirts, amid balloons and paper streamers. The Soph-Senior Hop was strongly supported by her sophomores.

Junior year for Thirty Five meant the beginning of major work, under the new semester system. To become a junior meant for her the beginning of the most vital part of college life, and she realized that the second half of college had begun and that she must make the most of her opportunities. She looked upon the "Frosh-Soph" scraps and wondered a bit how she had once been so enthusiastic about them.

As far as sports were concerned, she had already divided herself into a large group of spectators and a smaller group of varsity players. Many other activities interested her members, and juniors were to be found in every phase of campus life. The high light of social life — the Junior Prom — was held in April. Making a decided innovation, she published the Index for the first time for the seniors instead of for her own classmates.

All too soon she finds that she is forced to say, "Only one year left!"

1936 CLASS HISTORY

The members of the class of '36 returning to Massachusetts State College as sophomores, realized that several changes had taken place since their entrance into college life as mere "frosh" the year before.

In the first place, our numbers had been increased by many transfers from colleges and junior colleges. The college year had been changed from a three-term to a two-semester year, and we found our courses re-arranged to meet the requirements of the new program. Under the inspiration of our new president, Dr. Baker, the Horticultural Show, during our sophomore year, has become a permanent annual event, and the singing of carols on campus around the Christmas tree promises to become a tradition. Plans have been completed for the erection of a new college library and a men's dormitory, and we realize that during our four years great progress will have been made toward the completion of the plans for the future Massachusetts State College campus.

'36 is not at all proud of its record in the freshmen-sophomore sports this year. The freshmen won Razoo Night with a big margin, pulled the sophomores through the college pond, won the football game,—but they will tell all about that and we do not need to do so. However, the sophomore class is well represented in college athletics, having letter-men on every one of the varsity teams. In co-ed activities, the class has been more successful, having obtained the inter-class runner-up position in both soccer and basketball.

In academic activities, '36 is well represented in every line. We won second place in the Burnham Declamation Contest, and one of our members took the annual Poetry Contest prize. Two of the cast of the Roister Doisters annual play, "There's Always Juliet" were sophomores. Several of our musical members took part in the Bay State Revue, which this year was given in the form of an original musical comedy, "Let's Go Nutty". In the radio broadcast of the production, three of the soloists were from our class. We have held our own scholastically throughout the year and socially we have been most active taking in the Mardi Gras and every "Vic" party on campus.

As we continue our college life at State, we become more devoted to our "Dear Old Massachusetts", and are most happy that we still have two years in which to uphold her ideals and take part in her victories.

A YEAR GOES BY

The chapel tower is silver grey
When springtime opens leafy buds.
Mid lacy green it stands by day
But reaches toward the stars by night.

The chapel tower is pale as smoke
Beneath a scorching summer sun,
Not shaded by the neighboring oak
Nor airy shifting cloud above.

The chapel tower is warm and brown
Midst golden autumn's flaming leaves.
It's then the bell chimes above the town
To celebrate a winning game.

The chapel tower is steely grey
When winter snow comes sifting down.
Aloof, it seems, above the way
Of snowy, windblown passers-by.

FRESHMAN CLASS HISTORY

From all over Massachusetts, with a few from other states, came students to make up the class of '37. Each face was as unfamiliar as the next, but with the cooperation of the different organizations on campus, this situation was soon remedied.

Immediately upon our arrival, antagonism between the class of '36 and the class of '37 commenced. As customary, the first battle between the two lower classes was the sixty-man rope pull. The Freshmen, with the normal support of their loyal Junior friends, pulled the sixty sophomores through the refreshing waters of the campus pond. Next came Razoo Night. Even though the Freshmen did not win every match in wrestling and boxing, the night was one of victory for '37. Following these matches came the Night-Shirt Parade. Here the Freshmen, cheered on by their co-ed classmates, came out of the battle with the greatest number of shirts. Later in the season, between the halves of the Connecticut State football game, the Freshmen managed to pull, with little difficulty, the six sophomores over the half-way mark.

The Freshmen won the annual football game with the sophomores 19-8, but lost the soccer game 1-0. In basketball, they were victorious over the seniors, but lost again to the sophomore class.

All in all, this first year of college has been successful for the Freshman class.

POEM OF THE YEAR 1933-34

First Prize Fifteen Dollars, Shirley A. Bliss '37

Second Prize Ten Dollars, Dorothy Nurmi '36

Judge, David Morton

NOEL

Tumult of anticipation;
Hush of snow,
Falling . . . falling
On a waiting world.
A child stirs gently
In the straw,
Sad-eyed oxen breathe warm mist
In the cool night air.
And in the strange half-light
Joseph stands humble,
Hands clenched in aching reverence;
The world is taut with wonder.
Then a young lamb's bell
Shivers the glowing night
With soft Noel.

SHIRLEY A. BLISS '37

David Morton, famous American poet, in selecting the above poem for first honors, wrote: "Noel seems to be completely successful in creating an imaginative reality. Also it has the quality of drama — suspense and event."

SONNET

(To My Mother)

I shall not be afraid of growing old;
The end of day is always calm and still,
While God blows out the lamp of day, to hold
The dimmer twilight lanterns o'er the hill.

I shall drink tea by mellow candle-light
From delicate cups, and talk to those old friends
Who still remain; the rest I shall hold bright
Within my heart with love that never ends.

I shall have fires of birch wood burning low;
The subdued embers will no longer leap,
But in the dusky shadows gently glow,
And I shall be content with thoughts of sleep.
But while I wait, and watch the dying light,
The stars will shine, and then it will be night.

DOROTHY NURMI

In awarding the above sonnet second honors for 1933-34, David Morton wrote: "This seems firmly felt, and to move steadily and surely through the feeling. It has the right quietness and richness of tone for the reverie, which it is".

THE INTERFRATERNITY COUNCIL

THE fine spirit of cooperation and the good feeling among fraternities which is a notable factor of our campus life is due largely to the work of the Interfraternity Council. The Council is composed of two men from each fraternity. This group elects its president and secretary who call the frequent meetings of the Council at which matters of fraternity interests are acted upon.

The Council has as its purpose the promoting of desirable interfraternity relations through forwarding the athletic, social, and academic phases of campus activity in respect to the several houses. In carrying out its purpose this group acts virtually as a medium between the fraternities it represents and the Physical Education department, the Academic Activities board, and the Dean's office with all of which it cooperates. In this respect the Council conducts an interfraternity competition consisting of a varied program which is continued throughout the college year. To promote unification of interests and cooperation on the part of each fraternity, these three departments of the college have given a cup which is awarded annually to the house totalling the greatest number of points throughout the college year in athletics, academics, and scholarship. It is stipulated that the group winning the cup for three years in succession shall have it as permanent possession.

Universal fraternity grievances find audience in the meetings of the Interfraternity Council, as do many other matters of mutual concern, such as rushing rules, banquet dates, and pledging matters. The Council because of its having two members from each house, one junior and one senior, elected by and representing the interests of their respective houses, is able to maintain a high degree of cooperation and efficiency in the administration of such matters.

The activities of the Council include an annual banquet in the spring, at which new members from each house are introduced, and the staging of an Interfraternity Ball, a most promising innovation this year. Each year a delegate is sent to the convention of the National Interfraternity Council.

Q. T. V.

Founded at Massachusetts Agricultural College, May 12, 1869

Colors: White and Brown

IT WAS on the twelfth day of May in 1869 not quite two years after the first students had entered the college that Q. T. V. society was founded. Frederick W. Sommers, George Mackie, William R. Peabody, Lemuel L. Holmes, Russell W. Livermore, and Edward A. Fisher were the six young men who gathered in a room in South College to formulate plans for the first fraternity that was established on this campus. The meetings of the society were of great importance. Behind closed doors the significance of the fraternity symbols was made known each year to the incoming pledges. As was the custom with so many college secret societies, the members carried on intensive literary studies. The old records contain accounts of many scholarly talks that were presented.

In 1874 a chapter of Q. T. V. was established at University of Maine. Later other chapters were organized at University of New Hampshire, Pennsylvania State College, Worcester Polytechnic Institute, and Cornell University. However, because of the conservative standards of the Amherst Chapter regarding expansion, the Fraternity became a local in 1889 and has remained so ever since.

For many years the organization had quarters in North and South Colleges and on more than one occasion was there excitement when someone was dropped through a trap door or when there was a battle on between the inhabitants of the two buildings.

In 1915 with the aid of the alumni, who formed a corporation, the fraternity purchased its present property which was for many years the residence of the late Colonel Fearing. The house was erected under the direction of McKim, Mead and White, of New York.

As the sixty-fifth anniversary of the fraternity draws near there are scattered in all parts of the United States more than four hundred alumni. The active membership of Q. T. V. is forty-four students.

PHI SIGMA KAPPA

ALPHA CHAPTER

National Organization

Founded at the Massachusetts Agricultural College, March 15, 1873

Fifty Chapters — Sixteen Alumni Chapters

Publication: "The Signet"

Colors: Silver and Magenta Red

The Alpha Chapter of Phi Sigma Kappa was founded at Massachusetts Agricultural College on March 15, 1873, in old North College. The six founders were Jabez William Clay, Joseph Franklin Barrett, Henry Hague, Xenos Young Clark, Frederick George Campbell, and William Penn Brooks. Brooks, the only one of the six now living, makes his summer home in Amherst.

For five years the fraternity had no outside name, and was known to its members as the "Three T's," "Hell's Huddle," or "The Huddlers." In 1878 the name Phi Sigma Kappa was adopted. In the same year the Grand Chapter was organized with Clay as president. The undergraduate chapter was then known as Phi chapter of Phi Sigma Kappa.

In 1888 a chapter was formed at Albany Medical College, and in 1899, Gamma chapter at Cornell. The Amherst and Albany chapters were then called Alpha and Beta respectively. With this start, Phi Sigma Kappa was well on its way towards becoming a great national fraternity. By slow, careful growth, Phi Sigma Kappa has increased to forty-nine chapters spreading over the entire country.

In 1914, Alpha built its present chapter house located at the entrance of the Mass. State college campus, and in the summer of 1933 added a new dining-hall for the use of its members, now numbering thirty-two.

The founding of the Gamma Delta Chapter of Kappa Sigma Fraternity at the Massachusetts Agricultural College was in every way a notable event. Delta Gamma Kappa, a local fraternity established at the Massachusetts Agricultural College in 1868, enjoying as much fame and strength as a local organization could hope or wish for, voted to seek a charter as a chapter of Kappa Sigma. It was a forward, not a backward look, that made such action possible. Forty-four active and alumni members became Kappa Sigmas at the installation, the largest number that had ever been initiated into the Fraternity at one time and place. Among the chapter's older members are Professors Frank A. Waugh, professor of landscape architecture at the Massachusetts State College, and Professor J. L. Hills, dean of the College of Agriculture at the University of Vermont.

Four years ago it became the custom to award annually to that fraternity having the best record in athletics, academic activities, and scholarship a cup. It has been the aim of Kappa Sigma to encourage a balanced education, and its members have been awarded this cup twice in the three times it has been presented.

During the last year, the brothers have transformed a practically useless section of the basement into a modernly equipped and heated dining hall. It has been the purpose in the past and at present to develop an atmosphere of fellowship; the program of Kappa Sigma has been planned to this end.

Theta Phi, the fraternity which afterward became Theta Chapter of Theta Chi, was founded at Massachusetts Agricultural College at Amherst in February, 1908, and was recognized as one of the fraternities, by the college, on October 5 of the same year. Theta Phi was organized as the fifth fraternity on the campus, when fraternities were just beginning to find a fertile field for development at Massachusetts Agricultural College. The Fraternity was established by a group of sixteen men who were moved by ideals of closer fellowship and mutual benefits to band together into a new brotherhood.

Not until January, 1909, did the Fraternity have a home. The members associated together and met in the "Dorms", as did the other fraternities on campus. However, the need for a Chapter House was keenly felt, since this is so necessary for fraternity strength. Theta Phi secured a well located house near the campus and determined to make it a success. The Fraternity and the house were developed and improved to such an extent that soon there was a felt need of a stronger fellowship with a well established national organization. Thus in the Fall of 1911 Theta Phi was changed to Theta Chapter of Theta Chi, when the charter was granted by the National Grand Chapter of Theta Chi.

In the summer of 1918, the Fraternity left its original Chapter House for one of larger and better quarters. This house continued to be the home of Theta Chi until it moved into its present home after the World War.

The men of Theta Chapter of Theta Chi Fraternity have always represented a high degree of scholastic achievement and student activities, upholding the fine ideals which first prompted its birth back in 1908. At present the Chapter is in excellent condition with a strong active group. Again history repeats itself and the need for a larger and better house is keenly felt. The Fraternity is at present making specific plans and arrangements for the construction of a new house in the near future.

The history of Sigma Phi Epsilon is very similar to the history of any other fraternity on campus. Sigma Phi Epsilon started as a local fraternity and gradually grew large enough so that it became national.

Albert "Cherry" Dodge, of the class of 1912, was the man responsible for the foundation of the local Sigma Tau Delta fraternity. In the two years after its foundation, it grew quite rapidly for a new fraternity. In the year 1912, the brothers petitioned for admittance into the national fraternity of Sigma Phi Epsilon. A charter was soon granted the local fraternity and thus Sigma Phi Epsilon was added to the list of fraternities on this campus. That first year the members elected "Cherry" as president and ever since that day he has been closely connected with the fraternity.

During the first few years after its foundation, Sigma Phi Epsilon grew rapidly and became quite a strong influence on the campus. The twenty charter members certainly did a splendid job at starting a fraternity.

Shortly after its foundation the Great War came and Sigma Phi Epsilon did its part in sending several young men to serve their country. Several of these men never came back and several who did come back were maimed for life, but a few were honored by the country for which they served.

After the Great War the fraternity went forward much the same as it had before, until about 1925. At this time and just shortly after, the fraternity membership was on the wane. It looked as if something would happen to the fraternity. However, with the help and sacrifice of some of the men who were in the house, the fraternity gradually regained its position and pulled itself out of the slump into which it had fallen.

At present the fraternity is one of the strong fraternities on this campus and the active members hope that the part they have played in the history of the fraternity will be remembered for years to come.

Gamma Delta Sigma was the local fraternity from which Gamma Zeta chapter of Lambda Chi Alpha was formed. It was installed on May 18, 1912. The history of Lambda Chi Alpha is an interesting one. The mother chapter was founded at Boston University in 1909 and the local chapter was the first to be added to the original group. Since then it has grown rapidly and steadily until there are now eighty-four chapters in leading colleges all over the United States. In addition to these undergraduate groups there are forty-three alumni associations in cities throughout the country. Lambda Chi Alpha is one of the sixty senior members of the National Interfraternity Council.

Gamma Zeta Chapter has remained active since its founding in 1912 except during the World War when ninety-eight per cent of its members were enrolled in the service. Shortly after the fraternity's installation into the national organization, increased enrollment and a prominent position among the other fraternities on campus made the need for a house evident. In 1913 it obtained as its home the house which it now occupies. Gamma Zeta has always been active both as a member of Lambda Chi Alpha and among the other fraternities on the campus. During 1933 it had next to the highest scholastic average of all the chapters of Lambda Chi Alpha. Its members have always been prominent socially, scholastically, and athletically at Massachusetts State College.

ALPHA SIGMA PHI

GAMMA CHAPTER Established 1913

National Organization Founded at Yale University, 1845

Thirty-two Chapters — Ten Alumni Associations

Publication: "The Tomahawk"

Colors: Cardinal and Stone

Alpha Sigma Phi Fraternity was founded as a sophomore society at Yale College in 1845. Since each of the three upper classes had its own society, duality of membership existed. This situation ultimately contributed to a dormant condition of the fraternity, but in 1907 the Yale chapter was revived, not as a sophomore but as a university fraternity. At the present time there are thirty-two chapters of this national organization well established in many of the foremost colleges and universities in the United States.

The Gamma Chapter of Alpha Sigma Phi was established on this campus in 1913 and was chartered at that time by what was formerly known as the College Shakespearean Club, a literary society whose purpose and activities are well known to the alumni of this college. The original Gamma Chapter was first established at our neighboring institution, Amherst College, in 1854; however, that chapter was dissolved in 1860. The petition of the College Shakespearean Club to join Alpha Sigma Phi was accepted in 1913.

The purpose of this chapter has been to promote scholarship, fellowship, and fraternalism. This chapter has claimed a goodly number of the present and past faculty members in this college as well as in other universities in the country. It does not enroll honorary members, and its faculty members have been regularly initiated as active members. They cannot belong to any other national fraternity and they act as chapter advisers. It also boasts a widely scattered but co-operative body of alumni which has in its loyalty carried on the traditions and high ideals of Alpha Sigma Phi. The present active membership comprises about fifty young men who are daily asserting themselves in the various phases of college work and in extra curricular activities.

ALPHA GAMMA RHO

Mu Chapter

Established April 28, 1917

National Organization Founded at University of Ohio, April 4, 1908

Thirty-two Chapters — Twenty-six Alumni Associations

Publication: "The Sickle and Sheaf"

Colors: Green and Gold

Mu Chapter of Alpha Gamma Rho was originally Beta Kappa Phi, a local fraternity. It was started late in the fall of 1909 and was organized formally on February 10, 1910. Character, scholarship, and college loyalty were the basic tenets. Incorporation according to state laws was effected, although the group lived in a rented house until the purchase of an attractive home in 1913. During the winter of 1917, it was decided that the fraternity should enjoy the benefits of national prestige. Accordingly, A. H. Nehrling, Alpha, assisted the group in getting in touch with the national headquarters of Alpha Gamma Rho, and at the Ames convention of the year, Lincoln D. Kelsey presented a petition to nationalize Beta Kappa Phi. The request was honored and Mu Chapter came into existence.

Glenn Campbell, then editor of the "Sickle and Sheaf", installed the new chapter with the aid of Ford S. Prince, Alpha '13, J. B. Spaulding, Gamma '15, and W. L. Slate, Beta '09. On April 29th, 1917, twenty-two men had been initiated, and Frank S. Binks had been elected as first noble ruler. Outstanding among these charter members was Clarke L. Thayer, now Professor of Floriculture at the Massachusetts State College. In the next year, the strength of the chapter was depleted, due to the general exodus of men to the battle-fronts of France, but the beginnings of the new chapter were auspicious as the founding of a house which has since been equal in every respect to, and on a social par with, the other fraternities on campus.

Since that time the chapter has grown and flourished and now has a roster of two hundred and fifty alumni behind it. The affairs of the fraternity are run by the students themselves with the advice of a faculty member.

Alpha Gamma Rho's success has been brought about mainly by the maintenance of high standards of scholarship and morality among its members, which has ever made for better character and spirit.

KAPPA EPSILON

Founded at Massachusetts Agricultural College, February 1, 1913

Colors: Garnet, Gray and Gold

In October, 1912, a small group of non-fraternity men met in French Hall to organize a society which might admit to membership those men who should conform to the simple ideals of manhood, service, and democracy in which the seventeen charter members expressed faith. The initial letters of the words of the motto chosen by this group were Kappa Epsilon. Early the following spring the constitution of the new fraternity, presumably because of its unorthodox liberality, was accepted by the Student Life Committee on the condition that no competition be offered the other fraternities during rushing season and that men be pledged not before the second semester.

The National Federation of Commons Clubs, with which Kappa Epsilon became affiliated early in 1914, played an important part in the history of the fraternity until 1921, at which time the fraternity was reorganized to conform more closely than before to the other campus groups. The local chapter of the Commons Clubs, during the period of 1914-1917, achieved a position of prominence, locally by material growth accompanied by further administrative prohibitions, and nationally by the election of one of its members to the position of president of the National Federation, which at that time included chapters at eight well-known eastern colleges. The chapter had about fifty members until the war period, when it, like other college organizations, struggled along under great difficulties, with most of the juniors and seniors in the service. At about this time the group moved from its house on Mount Pleasant into rooms on the top floor of North College.

After the period of reorganization in 1921 there ensued a year of strife and ostracism until the fall of 1922, when an invitation to membership in the Interfraternity Council was accepted. In the four years previous to 1925 the fraternity occupied three houses, the present location being preceded by the house next to Sigma Phi Epsilon and a house on East Pleasant Street.

It has been almost a decade that the fraternity has occupied its present quarters. During this time expansion has been gradual but continuous, with the exception of a short period centering at 1929, until the present day conditions of capacity membership. Throughout Kappa Epsilon history the outstanding endeavor of loyal individuals is memorable.

ALPHA EPSILON PI

Phi Chapter

Founded at Massachusetts Agricultural College, 1916

National Organization

Founded at New York University, 1913

Colors: Blue and Gold

The history of the Phi Chapter of Alpha Epsilon Pi dates back to the fall of 1916 when four men, yearning for social friendship, bonded themselves together in a club, which they called U. E. C. (Unus et Omnibus). For the next few years the club met secretly. Its enrollment increased but slightly, and it looked as if the hopes of a Jewish fraternity would not materialize.

In 1920, the club came openly on campus. The members filed a petition to be recognized by the Student's Life Committee. The petition was rejected, but on March 1 of that year, the members changed the name of the club to Delta Phi Alpha. A chapter paper was founded, and a fraternity banner was made. Official recognition was granted on April 6, 1921.

By 1929, the existence of the fraternity was secure. On November 16, negotiations were begun with the national fraternity Alpha Epsilon Pi. These negotiations were climaxed in June 1930 when Delta Phi Alpha pledged Alpha Epsilon Pi.

The year 1930 marked another transgression in the history of the fraternity. Up to June of that year, the members had occupied Rooms 13 and 14, South College. However, the college authorities had ordered the remodelling of South into a freshmen's dormitory, and the members of Delta Phi Alpha were requested to vacate the rooms by the next year.

The house at 45 Pleasant Street was rented, but the sojourn there was brief, for in June 1931 the group was asked to move again. The house was to be torn down to make room for a proposed town park. Plans were made for the purchase of a house. The alumni, in a body, backed the undergraduates in their plan, and, during the summer of 1931, a house was bought at 1 Cosby Avenue.

Meanwhile, the college's name had been changed, and there followed a greater influx of Jewish students. Again the matter of nationalization was taken up, and in 1933, after four years of careful investigation by all concerned, the Student's Life Committee gave the fraternity permission to join Alpha Epsilon Pi. On December 24, 1933, Delta Phi Alpha was officially inducted as Phi Chapter of Alpha Epsilon Pi fraternity.

Theta Kappa Gamma, a new local fraternity, the first to appear on the campus since 1916, was formally recognized by President Baker and the administration on January 18, 1934.

Originally the idea of a young naturalization officer of a prominent national fraternity, the organization with its ideals rapidly gathered supporters, and after a summer of correspondence, a local home approved by the college was selected as the site of the fraternity's headquarters.

In September the group of interested students and faculty advisers met in their chapter home, 83 Pleasant Street, and proceeded to draw up a constitution, elect officers, and plan a program for the year.

The purpose of the group as outlined in its constitution is "To promote a spirit of good fellowship; to encourage the attainment of a high scholastic standing; to offer to each and every member the training and environment which characterize the college man; to cultivate a spirit of loyalty to the college; and to promote in every way social and intellectual intercourse among its members."

Soon after the first meeting of the group, a petition was drawn up and presented to the administration, which subsequently recognized the group as Theta Kappa Gamma Club.

The inauguration banquet was held at the Lord Jeffrey Inn on September 21, and was attended by over fifty guests, including members of the faculty, clergy, and students from Ohio State College.

The club has been active socially and is looking forward to its future fraternity life with great expectations.

On February 14, 1934, Phi Lambda Tau was officially recognized as the twelfth fraternity on the college campus.

Dr. Joseph Chamberlain, head of the Chemistry Department, was the guest speaker at the first annual banquet of Phi Lambda Tau at the Lord Jeffrey Inn on March 10, 1934. A few days later Dr. Chamberlain consented to become the faculty advisor for the fraternity.

The ideals of the fraternity, as expressed in its petition are to perpetuate friendship among the college students, and to encourage scholastic attainment. At the first official meeting a new constitution was presented, officers were elected, and committees were appointed. The fraternity later joined the Interfraternity Council. Temporary headquarters were selected. After a short but selective rushing season, ten pledges were chosen for the fraternity.

The series of events that occurred simultaneously with the formation and organization of the fraternity have been of interest and pleasure to its members. Its ideals may not be realized immediately but with its characteristic spirit of faith and diligence, great hopes may take definite shape in the near future.

Since the organization of the Intersorority Council in October, 1931, this group has done much each year towards establishing sororities on a firm basis at Massachusetts State College. The Council is composed of two women from each sorority, from which a president and secretary-treasurer are elected who call meetings once a month to act upon affairs of common interest to all the sororities.

Through the regulation of athletic, social, and academic phases of college life where it concerns sororities, the Council fulfills one of its main purposes. This year for the first time, an Intersorority Cup will be awarded to the sorority attaining the greatest number of points gained through a series of competitions, academic, athletic and scholastic, held during the year.

Intersorority Council holds, annually in April, a Formal dance, one of the outstanding social events of the college year.

Alpha Lambda Mu was originally one of the three open clubs formed by the division of the old open sorority Delta Phi Gamma. Elizabeth Reed '32, considered as the real organizer of the present sorority, was president of that club of five girls, which first met on October 26, 1930. On November 6, 1931, with the recognition of the faculty, it became one of the three closed sororities. The first pledging and initiation services of the new organization were held during January, 1932. The members of the original club and of the present sorority have been brought together by a desire to promote friendship and loyalty, to encourage high standards of scholarship, and to aid the members in showing good sportsmanship at all times.

When the old open sorority, Delta Phi Gamma, was broken up, the girls who later became the founders of Lambda Delta Mu formed one of the three new, more intimate clubs. It existed as a club from November 13, 1930, until November 16, 1931, when, with the recognition of the faculty, it became a closed sorority. It held its first initiation service to add new girls to the charter members on January 25, 1932. At this time there were twenty members. Since then it has grown until now forty-eight have been initiated. From its founding, Lambda Delta Mu has been active both socially and academically.

Sigma Beta Chi was one of the three original sororities founded by the various groups of the Delta Phi Gamma sorority. Although it was formed by the social group of the latter, its ideals embraced those of athletics, scholarship, and friendship as it became an independent group. Its purpose as a sorority is to foster friendship among women of like ideals and interests.

In the spring of 1933 the sorority secured the house, which was then in the process of construction, at 64 Lincoln Avenue. In September of that year nineteen girls entered the house and proceeded to make it a home. The year of 1933-34 has been an entirely successful one for Sigma Beta Chi, since the sorority house has fulfilled its purpose admirably in establishing the sorority as an important part of undergraduate life.

Phi Zeta, founded on February 11, 1932, seeks to draw together girls of mutual interests in an organization of comradeship. Even in the two short years of its existence, this sorority has become dear to the hearts of those bound together under the name, Phi Zeta, to those who are sincerely striving to uphold her noble ideals and to maintain her fine standards.

In the fall of 1933, Phi Zeta sorority established a house and dining hall at 70 Lincoln Avenue, which accomodates a good proportion of her members.

Adelphia is a Senior honor society whose members are chosen for their leadership and their interest in student affairs. Although their duties are not numerous, the members of Adelphia have charge of fall football rallies, the promotion of student forums, and special college activities which need the backing of a responsible group. Adelphia seeks to promote leadership and good fellowship on the campus. Its ideal is to make students interested in working for worthwhile student functions.

This year only one football rally was held on the drill field. It preceded the opening game and consisted of a large bonfire, much singing and cheering, and speeches.

Adelphia has always been ready to render assistance whenever necessary.

For several years many students of this college have been proud of the fact that the Honor System existed on campus. It seemed to give the college prestige that its students were allowed to take examinations without proctors, that they could definitely be placed on their own to do the right thing.

The Honor Council itself has one of the most difficult positions to see that this system is carried out. The 1933-34 council felt that of late student opinion was becoming lax and it is due, in a great measure, to the Honor Council members that this year has witnessed a reawakening of active interest in the system and of a more complete understanding, on the part of everyone of the purpose.

"We, the students of the Massachusetts State College, believe that the goal of education is character. The man of character deals fairly with himself and with others and would rather suffer failure than stoop to fraud. The Honor System stands for this attitude in all relations of the students with the faculty. In expression of our belief we pledge ourselves to the support of the the Constitution of the Honor System."

The Women's Student Government Association is the one organization to which all the women belong. Each year the association elects an executive council which has a two-fold purpose, disciplinary and social. In its former capacity it enforces rules and endeavors to maintain a high standard of conduct among Massachusetts State College women. In its second capacity it sponsors teas and entertainments; in the fall it assists the Freshmen to make their adjustments to college environment.

The Maroon Key is one chapter of a national honorary society which has chapters at many of the leading colleges in the United States. The chapter name is determined in each case by the college color.

The main purpose of this society is to act as host to all visiting athletic teams, and all other groups of visitors that may come to our campus. The duties of the members of the Maroon Key are threefold: They are to meet the visiting groups and make them feel at home; to help the visitors in any way possible; and to show them the main points of interest about our campus.

The social activities of the society are limited to the "Mardi Gras", a formal dance which is held in the spring, and is one of the high lights of the college social season. For recognition, Maroon Key members wear the society insignia, the gold key with a maroon "M" on a white background.

The Maroon Key on our campus acquires membership by having the sophomore class elect ten men to be active members for their sophomore year. Each year a new group of men is elected to the chapter by the sophomore class.

The United Religious Council at Mass. State College is composed of representatives of the Y. W. C. A., The Christian Association, The Newman Club, and The Stockbridge Christian Association. The duties of this group are numerous, for besides sponsoring the three day conference program in December which was conducted by Rev. M. J. Ahern, S. J. of Weston College, the Council carried on the Red Cross Drive, managed the Freshmen Handbook, sent representatives to Northfield and also to Yale. By combining the different religious interests on the campus, this organization has endeavored to bring about religious harmony.

The Young Woman's Christian Association has attempted to provide an opportunity for its members "to realize full and creative lives through a growing knowledge of God". Its program has included an active participation, through the United Religious Council, in the sponsoring of the major religious events of the year, but particular emphasis has been placed upon the organization of small groups meeting regularly for discussion and original work in poetry, dramatics, music, world education, and for Sunday afternoon retreats. Through the sending of delegates to the Northfield Conference and to Maqua the summer camp, and special programs held during the year, the organization has sought to supplement the regular campus activities.

With the increasing interest in all phases of recreation and especially in the Outing Club idea, an association of college outing clubs has come into prominence. This association, known as the Intercollegiate Outing Club Association was begun by the Dartmouth Outing Club and one of its first members was the Massachusetts State College club. Sey Dunn of Dartmouth, attending the M. S. C. O. C. banquet in 1932 as one of the speakers, told of the proposed association whose object would be to stimulate outdoor activity in colleges, to form new college outing clubs, and to allow existing clubs to exchange ideas. The State club saw the value in such an organization and the result was that Sey Dunn returned to Dartmouth with another club enrolled in the infant I. O. C. A.

The past year has been an active one for the Outing Club. In the spring a long trip to the lofty heights of Mt. Greylock was enjoyed. The annual banquet, at which President Baker, himself an enthusiastic outdoorsman, told his adventures in travelling with a pack train through the Northwest on a government survey, climaxed the season's activities.

With the coming of fall and the opening of college, activities were resumed. Starting the season, Mr. Basil Wood gave his inimitable lecture on camping to a large and enthusiastic audience. The following Sunday, a rollicking, jovial crew consisting mostly of freshmen and new comers to the college, rumbled off in a large open truck to make the acquaintance of Mt. Massamet at Shelburne Falls. Supper was eaten at the summit and a musical get-together was held around the campfire. On Columbus Day an unusually large band of hikers left the campus in the open truck and the South Amherst school bus, to enjoy the magnificent view and colorful autumn foliage from the height of Mt. Monadnock. The fall rapidly passed with Mountain Day, a trip to Mt. Killington and other shorter trips to adjacent points.

1933 HORTICULTURAL SHOW

An arrow-straight black and white spire about whose base were placed choice apples and slender evergreens and which was crowned with a cluster of pure white chrysanthemums struck a keynote of simplicity and beauty which characterized the entire Horticultural Show of nineteen-thirty-three. The floor plan was laid out with this modernistic pylon as a center. The exhibits were arranged along both sides of aisles which radiated to the corner and sides and also around the walls of the cage.

Along several aisles florists had placed their displays of carefully chosen flowers. There were baskets and vases of chrysanthemums ranging all the way from the tiny button variety to huge richly colored blooms. Many lovely colors were blended on the carnation tables. Roses, beautiful and rare, were much admired. Other aisles were set with exhibits of dish gardens, examples of floral arrangements, and table decorations. Many of these were prepared by students of floriculture.

Yet another aisle was devoted to a display from the Horticultural Manufactures department. A pyramid of preserved fruits, vegetables, and meat, topped by rows of red quince and green mint jelly, a tempting array of candies, displays of cider and maple products, constituted a rich store.

In part, around the outside were fruit exhibits — both competitive and instructive. A guessing contest, an artificial apple tree, and an apple pie making competition were even included in this section.

Along another wall were examples of formal gardens. On the Edge of the Clearing, Terminus of a Formal Garden, and Mossy Dell were some of the outstanding ones which lent an air of dignity to the show. Near these was an interesting display of furniture made from native woods and arranged by the forestry department. A fine touch was the memorial to Charles H. Patterson. At the end of a path, surrounded by evergreens, a picture of our late professor was framed in a simple white altar beside which was placed a single rosebud. One of the most interesting presentations in this section was Pyrrha's Dream. Beyond a narrow lawn was a close clipped hemlock hedge in which there was a narrow opening. Through this could be seen a replica of the famous statue of Pyrrha reflected in a mirror pool. The very simplicity of it gave it its loveliness.

Another side was entirely taken up by two huge cornucopias made from interwoven cornstalks. "No richer gift has Autumn poured from out her lavish horn" than the variety of pumpkins, corn, carrots, and other vegetables that literally poured from these great "horns".

The show was permeated by an air of harvest, of beauty in its height, a feeling of work well done. This was the twenty-fifth Horticultural Show to be given at the college. In the last few years it has made tremendous strides from the annual Autumn display in French Hall to the truly magnificent exhibition of nineteen-thirty-three. It attracted eleven thousand people to our campus during the three days in which it was presented. Among the visitors were Governor and Mrs. Ely, officers of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society as well as officials from such organizations in neighboring states. Much credit is due to H. Paul Stephensen, general chairman of the committee, for it was through his efforts and those who worked with him that there was produced what one newspaper has called "The outstanding exhibit of the year in Horticultural Shows."

CLUBS

THE ANIMAL HUSBANDRY CLUB

President	Harold C. Potter '34
Secretary-Treasurer	Sherwin L. Williams '34

The Animal Husbandry Club was established as a professional organization for the purpose of bringing together during the winter months the students in animal husbandry. Visiting economists, scientists, journalists, and men in the practical field address the group from time to time, and an effort is made to strengthen the relationships between the college student and the research and practical worker.

In the past, the organization has well served its purpose, and has enabled the students to make contacts that have been of value after graduation. The Animal Husbandry Club attempts to bring about a balance between social, practical, and theoretical problems, and is a valuable part of the curriculum of every student in this field.

CHESS CLUB

President	Louis Winokur
Managing Secretary	Henry Riseman

Two years ago a group of ten men gathered together in the Memorial Building one Saturday afternoon with the intention of founding a chess team which would participate in intercollegiate contests. A club was formed which was called the Chess and Checker Club. A program of intramural activity, consisting of a round robin among the members, was inaugurated in the Spring. By this method, a team of three men was selected to represent the group. Attention was then turned to the M.S.C. Faculty, and all willing chessmen were met in a tournament. The results proved the students to be the better chessmen, for all contests played turned out to be undergraduate victories.

The second year of the club's existence was marked by a broader and more extensive program of activity and development. Among the notable accomplishments of the year are: (1) the development of the club into a group of twenty two men; (2) the submission of an application for recognition as an accredited student activity; (3) the acquisition of the Conn. Valley College Chess Championship (by virtue of our unique position as the only college chess team in the valley).

DAIRY CLUB

President	Robert T. Coleman
Vice-President	Harry Pyenson
Secretary-Treasurer	Paul O. Wood

The Dairy Club was founded in 1933 and is the youngest of the departmental clubs. This organization was established for the purpose of creating a stronger department of dairy science by bringing the students together at regular intervals. The club meets regularly throughout the college year and is addressed by at least one speaker each month on matters pertaining to chemistry, bacteriology, economics, or some other phase of dairy science. It is hoped that this organization will bring the students in contact with the active workers in the field of dairying, and that all who are interested in the production and distribution of milk and milk products will attend the meetings.

THE FERNALD ENTOMOLOGY CLUB

The Fernald Entomology Club, so named in tribute to Dr. H. T. Fernald in particular and to the Fernald family in general, including Maria and Charles H. Fernald, all entomologists of world reknown, was founded on January 4, 1925.

The prime purpose of the Club is to keep the students in touch with the most recent advances in entomology, which is accomplished in three different ways:—by speakers giving reviews of recent literature, by discussion of field problems and experiences among the students, and by talks delivered by prominent entomologists who visit the college. The materials so presented are supplementary to the required courses in entomology.

Membership in the Club is voluntary for all junior and senior and graduate students majoring in Entomology, while guests and other students are cordially invited to attend. Meetings are held once a month, with interpolated meetings at various times when it is possible to obtain a speaker of note. Under the auspices of the Club, prominent visiting entomologists often give informal talks to our students.

Its annual publication, the Fernald Club Yearbook contains much of interest to graduates of this college now doing work in Entomology, and to other interested entomologists. The Yearbook and the Club are conducted entirely by students who show great interest in the advancement of these activities.

HISTORY-SOCIOLOGY CLUB

OFFICERS

President	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	Alexander A. Lucey '34
Vice-President	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	Joseph Smiaroski '35
Secretary	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	Frances Woodbury '34
Faculty Advisor	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	Harold Carey

The club was organized this year to permit students majoring in History and Sociology to supplement the courses now offered in these subjects.

Informal meetings have been held every three weeks. Guest speakers have discussed interesting topics and experiences. The club has received the publications and books distributed by the Carnegie Foundation which sponsors the International Relations Club.

HOME ECONOMICS CLUB

President	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	Alberta E. Skipton
Vice-President	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	Shirley D. Putnam
Secretary	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	Elizabeth Low
Treasurer	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	Marjorie E. Whitney

The purpose of the Home Economics Club is to develop a professional interest among the girls, to bring them in touch with women in the field and with the national organizations, and to cultivate friendships among students and members of this department.

Meetings are held usually once a month in the Homestead and programs of interest are presented. Any girl majoring in home economics is eligible for membership.

K. O. CLUB

The "Karry On Club" is made up of former 4-H Club members who still have an interest in club work. Its object is "to promote interesting Junior Extension work from the leader's standpoint and to keep the 4-H Club spirit alive among College students."

This club was organized in 1927 by a group of coeds and enlarged in 1929 to allow men students to join. The present enrollment is about one hundred students. The advisor is George L. Farley, State Club Leader.

Meetings are held monthly in the new Farley 4-H Club House. This building was constructed during the past summer, under the supervision of Mr. Dirks and Lawrence Peck, by 4-H Club boys from this State. The money was raised by 4-H Club workers and their friends.

LANDSCAPE CLUB

The Landscape Club is made up of all the landscape students who are interested in getting a little more in their field than just what the different courses offer. Professors in the department and outside speakers are heard, from time to time. A studio dance and a trip to visit estates and parks are planned for each year. In the spring of 1933 a very pleasant and worthwhile day was spent in visiting the large estates about Lenox and Stockbridge. Through the club, the members come in contact with men in the profession and with some of the work that has been done.

Roger Alton is president of the club for 1934.

THE MATHEMATICS CLUB

Every other Wednesday evening during the winter months is reserved by students interested in mathematics for the "Math Club". Here are explained the interesting highways and byways which lie away from the beaten paths of geometry, algebra, and calculus. Presentations are made of the classical problems, such as the tri-sectioning of an angle, of puzzles and recreations, geometric designs in nature, the history of our number systems, and great names in the history of mathematics. Then, after the formal speeches of the evening are over, there are always informal discussions which keep the members there long after the allotted time is up.

The club is unique in the fact that it has no officers, and that the membership is not restricted. The speakers are students, usually those majoring in mathematics, who have done extra work along some line in which they are especially interested. It is largely through the efforts of Professor Frank C. Moore that the club exists. He was its founder, and is largely responsible for securing the speakers and arranging the bi-monthly programs.

MENORAH SOCIETY

Following a meeting Sunday evening, March 11, 1934, the Jewish students revived the Menorah Club, the Hebrew cultural and religious organization. The plan for its formation was projected under the guidance of Dr. Maxwell H. Goldberg. The following officers were elected: President Max Dubin '35, Vice Pres. Henry D. Epstein '35, Secretary Florence Bilsky '36.

What the organization can mean to the student as well as to the college is expressed by the Intercollegiate Menorah Society which aims to "put its members in contact with all the romance and poignancy of Jewish traditions, with all the inquiring activity of modern Jewish effort, with all the science and art that is building the Jewish future."

The group hopes to appreciate the best of Jewish culture and tradition, and to become really conscious of the rich heritage which is theirs.

THE NEWMAN CLUB

The Newman Club was founded at Mass. State College in November 1929 in an effort to organize the Roman Catholic students on the Campus. This organization is a part of the United Religious Council and cooperates with it in all its activities. Then too the Newman Club is in the process of becoming affiliated with the National Federation of College Catholic Clubs. During the year, the Club has sponsored a series of lectures by prominent laymen and clergy. Among the speakers were the Reverend Dr. Cummings of Northampton, Rev. M. J. Ahern, S. J. of the Weston College, Honorable Daniel D. O'Brian of Northampton and the Reverend Dr. Carol Bernhardt, S. J. who gave a very scholarly talk on "Newman as A Man of Letters." Rev. Fr. John J. Foley of St. Brida's Church is spiritual advisor to the Club.

PHYSICS CLUB

The Physics Club, with the generous cooperation of the Physics Department has been, during the winter and spring months, running a series of meetings at which various topics in Physics were discussed. In order that the subjects be understood by the audience, membership in the club is restricted to those who have taken advanced courses in the department. Special papers on various topics, illustrated by experiments, and two moving pictures entitled, "The Hydrogen Ion in Electrolysis" and "The Three Electron Radio Tube" have been presented at the bi-monthly meetings. Among the topics of special papers were "Crystal Structure", "The History of the Atomic Theory", and "Various Topics in Sound". After each meeting the club partakes of an informal buffet lunch in the newly decorated banquet hall of the physics building (which is pressed into service during the day as a laboratory for the elementary physics classes). The arts are not entirely absent, for during the serving of refreshments the members are entertained by the music of the best jazz bands in America as well as that of the greatest opera singers in the world. All thanks to the Department's victrola, amplifier and supply of records!

SOCIAL SCIENCE CLUB

In the late fall of 1933, attempts to organize a group interested in social conditions and current affairs, crystallized in the formation of the Social Science Club. It was organized under the direction and guidance of J. Paul Williams. The club was launched in encouraging fashion with an initial membership enrollment of forty. The officers elected were as follows: Pres. Glenn Shaw '35, Vice Pres. Miriam Oikemus '37, Secretary Max Dubin '35.

The purpose of the group was threefold: (1) to attempt to learn the truth about social conditions by listening to speakers who were well acquainted with the facts, (2) to conduct club discussion groups for further individual enlightenment, (3) to make observation trips to places of interest to the organization.

Early in its career, the group conducted a week-end trip to Brookwood Labor College where class discussions were attended. Later, on Feb. 24, 1934, it was represented at the Connecticut Valley Student Convention Against War, where a part was taken in the drawing up of the anti-war resolutions.

The club hopes to continue active participation, insofar as students are able, in affairs involving social well-being.

THE MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN

Important in the permanent recording of college events is a weekly publication, known on the State College campus as the Massachusetts Collegian. Not only does this newspaper serve as an index of events, past and present, but it also endeavors to reflect student and faculty opinion by publishing interviews communications and questionnaires.

During the past year, the staff has instituted the six page issue as a more frequent feature than formerly. While the policy did not tend toward a daily or bi-weekly publication as some campi advocate, it was felt that more justice might be done campus affairs by a larger issue. In addition to putting out a larger issue there have also been included more photographs than in the past, the opinion being that they add interest to the page and also serve as an appropriate recognition of service.

In skimming the paper one notices a variety of material. On the first page one is generally attracted by at least one, and often more, photograph. On closer inspection one sees the "current event in the Collegian" and the "outstanding event of the week". In addition to the feature articles of the week, are found usually an interview with some prominent character, and the campus calendar.

Perhaps the greatest variety of material is disclosed on the second page. Constructive criticism of campus situations and activities has been the recent policy in the editorials. One generally finds in them matter for discussions in regard to proposed improvement of college affairs. In contrast to the rest of the paper is the column entitled "The Campus Crier", the purpose of this being to recount humorous campus happenings as well as other pertinent remarks, jokes, and anecdotes. In the "Agora" the student who has a worthwhile opinion to present has ample opportunity. Weekly there appears at least one communication inviting campus discussion. In addition to the regular column containing announcements there has recently been added one known as the "Gadfly", a satirical article attacking current situations.

Sports are given the entire third page in a combination of articles, photographs, and a column, "State-Sportlight". In addition to varsity news the page contains outstanding news regarding opponents, individual stars on campus, fraternity competition and any items of interest concerning the physical education department.

In addition to the above mentioned articles, the staff annually conducts a senior questionnaire and a poem of the month contest. Fifteen hundred copies of the paper are printed weekly, of which approximately four hundred are mailed to alumni and friends of the college. About one hundred and seventy-five copies are sent to high school libraries throughout the state.

LET'S GO NUTTY

An original musical comedy in two acts, written by the students, was presented at Bowker Auditorium, Friday evening, December 15, 1933. The music of the eleven songs was written by W. Grant Dunham, David Cosgriff, and Edward Law; the words were the combined efforts of Thurl D. Brown, Bernice Dolan, Donald Chase, Fred Nisbet, and W. Grant Dunham. Warren Southworth was general director of the show; Edgar Sorton composed the orchestrations and W. Grant Dunham was mainly responsible for the plot of the comedy.

The Burnham Declamation Contest has become increasingly popular since it was established by Mr. T. O. H. P. Burnham in 1875. In the 1933 Contest, the number of students competing was sufficiently large to necessitate the holding of a preliminary contest, and those who appeared on the program on May 24 were the finalists chosen from a group of thirteen candidates.

The declamations had been carefully selected and prepared, and were admirably presented.

STUDENT CURRICULUM COMMITTEE

Early in January of this year, President Baker appointed a Student Committee to investigate the curriculum at the Massachusetts State College. This group, consisting of the following seniors: Miss Harriette Jackson, Miss Betty Wheeler, Donald Smith, Edmund Clow (chairman), Nelson Wheeler, Harold Potter, and Alvan Ryan (secretary), has been making a careful and exhaustive investigation of the curriculum, in an endeavor to discover its weakness and find means of strengthening it. Early in June the committee will submit its findings to President Baker.

The committee has already, through the medium of The Collegian, presented certain questions to the student body for consideration. The opinion of the students in regard to having the A. B. degree here has been solicited, and numerous changes in requirements, specific courses, and in the honors course system have been considered from their various aspects. The curricula of other colleges, and the particular needs of this institution have both been considered by the student committee. At all times its members have solicited student opinion and have attempted to encourage the student body to consider the problem of the curriculum and its administration as a fundamental and vital one, a question certainly worthy of earnest thought.

The findings of the committee should be most valuable in giving to Dr. Baker the point of view of the student body as formulated by a group of seniors who, having themselves "gone through the mill", have offered their constructive criticism while the entire experience of four college years remained still vivid in their minds.

With over three hundred and fifty dads attending, the annual Dad's Day was successfully held on October 14, 1933. The whole day was devoted to the entertainment of the fathers of the Massachusetts State students.

In the military review which was held in the morning the military majors gave an exhibition of skilled horsemanship. In the afternoon the dads received complimentary tickets to the football game with Connecticut State College which resulted in a 40-7 victory for Massachusetts State.

The special feature of the day's events was presented in the evening, a program of fraternity and sorority skits.

The complete program was as follows:

Chips off the Old Block	Alpha Lambda Mu
Finkelstein's German Band	Alpha Sigma Phi
God Bless our Home	Phi Sigma Kappa
Four College Years	Q. T. V.
War	Alpha Epsilon Pi
Life on the 'Steppes	Lambda Delta Mu
Dad's Hour	Alpha Gamma Rho
Good Old Daze	Sigma Beta Chi
Satire on Midsummer Night's Dream	Sigma Phi Epsilon
1909 Class Reunion	Kappa Epsilon
Zemskoye Sobraniye	Lambda Chi Alpha
Night in a Turkish Harem	Kappa Sigma
Sophisticated Lady	Phi Zeta
Arizona Rythm	Theta Chi

MOUNTAIN DAY

At eleven o'clock on October 19th, over three hundred enthusiastic students, freed from the gloom and the grime of the classroom and the laboratory, left the campus to become mountaineers for a day in celebration of that annual event, Mountain Day.

The multi-colored, variously equipped hikers approached Mount Toby from all points of the compass; some walked, some hitch-hiked, and some even went on bicycles; and by noon, the usually silent trails were overflowing with students. It is rumored that there are several prominent trails on Toby, but on October 19th, even the seasoned Outing club members seemed to doubt it. Most of the climbers found their way to the top of the mountain; some were fortunate enough to locate the cabins and the caves; but all of them found the grub wagon. It is said that many of the hikers found their way through the maze of apples, doughnuts, hot-dogs, and cider kegs, at least a half a dozen times.

The wood-sawing contest did not materialize, but Dean Burns, substituting for any and all contests, addressed the eager group in his own inimitable manner.

President Baker, Dean Machmer, and several other members of the executive and administrative staffs, took advantage of the opportunity to enjoy the crisp, clean air of Mount Toby. The outing club members have good reason to believe that next year the chapel bell shall, of its own accord, choose one of those rare fall days as Mountain Day.

JUNIOR PROM

Junior Prom! the highlight of the social season and certainly the most memorable of this year's dances, was held on April twenty-seventh. For this occasion the drill hall went sophisticated with black and white modernistic effects. The musical scores of the evening were supplied by Phil Emerton and his Diamonds. To add interest and a lasting memory of Prom, favors with the state seal were given. Amidst all this magnificence a Prom queen and her attendants were chosen. This was an innovation for which the 1935 committee was responsible and who knows but it may become a tradition!

The chaperones for this occasion, who also acted as judges of the reigning beauty, were President and Mrs. Hugh P. Baker, Dean and Mrs. William L. Machmer, Professor and Mrs. Guy V. Glatfelter, and Mr. and Mrs. Emory Grayson.

Sophomore-Senior Hop of June 11, 1933, was another successful dance in the setting of a formal garden. The walls were covered with night blue, with tall juniper trees placed at ten foot intervals. The main axis was terminated by a statue of a Grecian goddess raised on a pedestal on the southern wall. This statue and pedestal in turn were on a terrace about two feet high running across the whole south end of the hall, on which the orchestra sat. The minor axis was terminated by a bird-bath and sun dial. Entrance to the Drill Hall was gained through the north door which led one out onto a veranda covered with vines of English ivy and wistaria.

Two large box-wood trees stood at the edge of the veranda at the entrance to the garden. The veranda and the terrace were closed in with small white railings. These decorations in their simplicity were not too heavy and consequently not depressing, but rather colorful and cool on that warm June night.

The committee was fortunate in being able to obtain the music of Mal Hallett. Mal was just coming out of retirement, so to speak. He had not been heard around here for some time so he was really quite a drawing card. The eccentric playing of the incomparable drummer and the peg-legged bull fiddler, along with the well rendered fast numbers, were the features of the dance.

MILITARY BALL

The annual Military Ball opened the formal dance season on January thirteenth. Those present, including guests from other college Reserve Officers' Training Corps, danced in a brilliant military setting. Overhead was a low ceiling which was a representation of an early American flag. It was done in strips of red and white crepe paper; in one corner was the blue background with the thirteen white stars placed upon it. The walls were covered with a deep blue upon which were placed sets of crossed sabers. The decorations became particularly effective when, after the stirring grand march, the overhead lights were turned on and shone down through the flag.

That very important feature of the evening — the music — was supplied by Bert Green and his band of sixteen musicians. The chaperones included the members of the college staff of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps. Those on the committees deserved much credit for a splendid dance; they were:

MARDI GRAS

Mardi Gras, which is the annual dance sponsored by the sophomore honor society, the Maroon Key, was held this year on March ninth. It was decided that the dance should be formal. The committee secured as an orchestra one which always finds favor on this campus, that of Eddie Murphy of Worcester. In the true spirit of the original dance, the Drill Hall was decorated in balloons and streamers of every imaginable color. A touch of individuality was introduced by a huge maroon key and class numerals placed on a white background behind the orchestra.

It was truly a gala affair and there are many couples who will remember the night "when we danced at the Mardi Gras". The special committees who were largely responsible for the success of the affair are as follows: General Chairman, Hamilton Gardner; Decorations, Dean Glick and Leo Carboneau; Orchestra, Al Dodge and Myles Boylan; Refreshments, Fred Murphy and John Stewart; Tickets, Myles Boylan and Arthur Bixby.

INTERSORORITY FORMAL

The Intersorority Formal Dance which was held in Drill Hall on the thirteenth of April was the first of the spring dances to be held on campus.

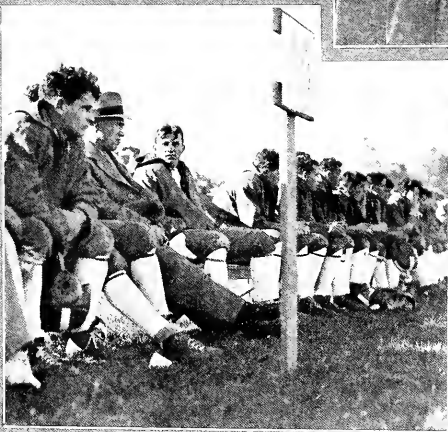

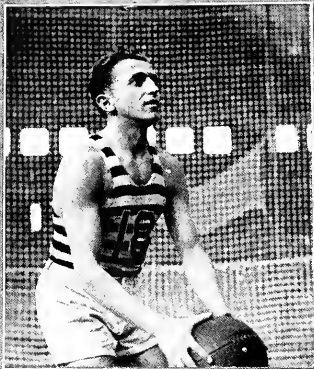

Among the interesting features of the dance was the novel scheme carried out in the decorations. The entire hall was transformed into a garden. Bright colored lanterns which swung gaily above the dancers lent a festive air to the occasion; flowers entwining in white trellises decorated the walls; and what appeared to be a stone wall with flowers at its base proved to be chairs facing onto a pathway around the sides of the hall. The orchestra and the patrons and patronesses sat in sections of the hall enclosed in white fences and having garden furniture. Music was furnished by Ed Murphy and his orchestra. Nothing seemed to have been forgotten; even the old stone well was there!

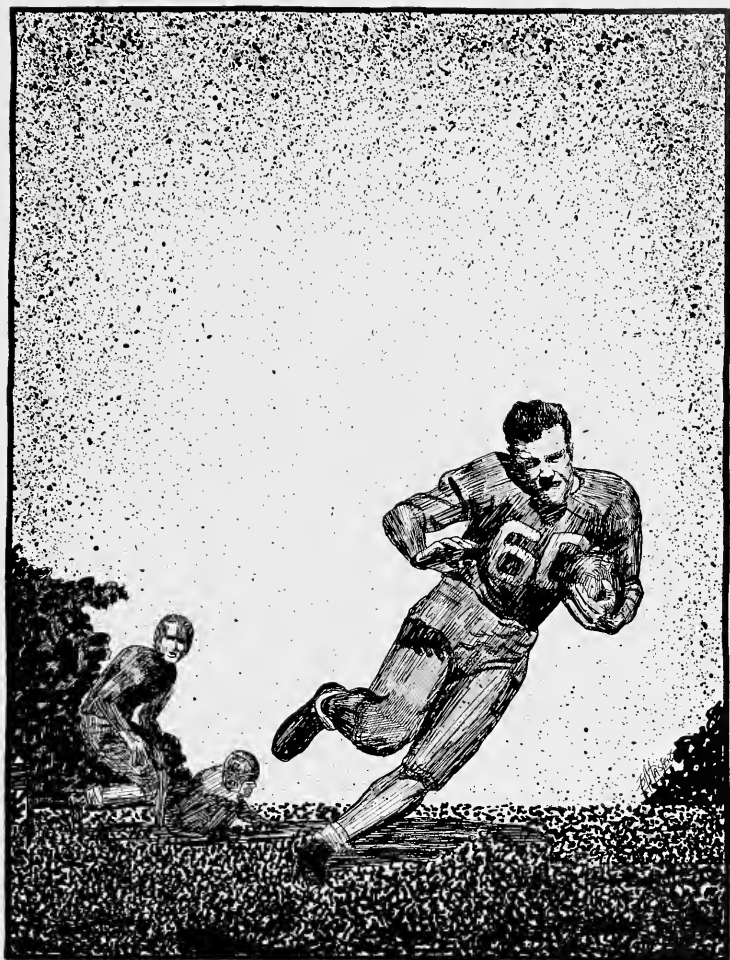

The patrons and patronesses, representing the four sororities which gave the dance, were Mr. and Mrs. John Baker, Captain and Mrs. Hughes, Mr. and Mrs. Taube, and Dr. and Mrs. Fraker.

The Committee which arranged the dance were Sarah Peaslee, general chairman, Muriel Brackett, decorations, Mildred Hovey, music, Marjorie Jensen, chaperones, Edith Smith, refreshments.

INTERFRATERNITY BALL

Not just another formal dance, but a most successful example of cooperation was the first Interfraternity Ball which took place on May 18, 1934. This affair was an experiment on the part of the Interfraternity Council, and it is hoped that it will become an annual affair. By cooperating, it was possible to obtain much better music for this spring dance than the individual houses could obtain. Paul Tremaine's orchestra furnished the rhythm. This most successful affair was the result of the efforts of Ambrose T. McGuckian, Roy T. Cowing, and Julian P. Griffin.

1933 FOOTBALL SEASON

Although the Massachusetts State College varsity football eleven was handicapped considerably by injuries to its great back and captain, Lou Bush, the Statesmen completed a season of five victories and three losses. Playing a variation of the Notre Dame style of football, Head Coach Taube's team won seven, lost one and tied one in 1931, while last year's eleven conquered their opponents in seven of the nine contests.

After the opening game with Cooper Union had been cancelled, the Statesmen commenced the gridiron season with a smashing victory over the highly-touted Polar Bears of Bowdoin College on Alumni Field, 14-0. In the middle of the second period, Johnny Stewart, sophomore halfback and later to be a regular on the undefeated Maroon and White basketball five, hurled a beautiful 20-yard pass to Captain Lou Bush, who raced thirty yards for the score. In the third session, Captain Bush led a 76-yard drive down the field, the Statesmen completing a score when Stewart plunged over for the second touchdown. Bill Frigard, husky full back, converted both points after touchdowns. The brilliant victory over Bowdoin was saddened by an injury to Captain Bush, which handicapped the clever Maroon and White leader the remainder of the season.

With Bush and most of the first-string regulars sitting on the bench, the Statesmen romped to an easy win over a weak Connecticut State eleven on Alumni Field as the feature of Dad's Day program, 40-7. Two touchdowns were scored in the first quarter, Bill Frigard plunging over for the first, and Adams receiving a pass over the goal line from Soulliere for the second six-pointer. In the middle of the second period, Elmer Allen, lanky sophomore fullback, scored on a line play for the Taubemen, and a few minutes later Al Ryan chalked up the fourth touchdown on a pass. During the final half, State scored but twice, Consolatti and Rutstein carrying the ball over the last white line.

After a bitter struggle, the Statesmen finally outfought a stubborn Rhode Island State eleven to conquer, 14-12. Rhode Island scored first in the game, Fisher carrying the ball over the goal line, but his team mate, Keany failed to convert the extra point. Just before the whistle for the end the first half, Bush hurled a 40-yard pass to Binka Smith for a touchdown and Frigard kicked the extra point. After Bush had hurled a lateral pass to Frigard for the second touchdown, and Frigard had again converted the extra point, Rhode Island began a determined drive down the field which resulted in a second touchdown. Fisher, however, failed to convert the point.

Led by Captain Lou Bush, the Statesmen chalked up the fourth straight win of the season, with a decisive victory over an ancient rival, Worcester Tech, 20-6. After the Engineers had held the Taubemen in check in the first period, Lou Bush entered the fray and immediately scored a touchdown. After several exchanges of punts, Bush carried the ball over from the three-yard line for the second Maroon and White touchdown. Bill Frigard kicked both extra points. After Swenson had scored for Worcester Tech in the third quarter, Bush raced around end for the final State touchdown.

Seeking its third straight victory over Amherst College, the Statesmen were outplayed and overpowered by a superior Sabrina eleven in a desperate contest at Pratt Field, 13-0. The Maroon and White warriors threatened to score but once when Lou Bush advanced the ball to the Amherst 16-yard line. The Statesmen's offense was handicapped considerably by injury to Lou Bush and Johnny Stewart earlier in the game, the Taubemen scoring but four first downs to 13 for Amherst.

The Maroon and White eleven suffered its second straight loss of the season, when St. Anselm's conquered the Taubemen in a closely fought game, 7-0. Play during the entire contest was hard and even, but in the final minute of the game, a substitute halfback for St. Anselm's raced 90 yards for the lone touchdown.

With Captain Lou Bush leading a brilliant offensive attack, the Statesmen conquered a strong Rensselaer eleven 20-6. A few minutes after the opening, of the game, State carried the ball to the three-yard line and Bush plunged over for his first touchdown, and Stewart kicked the extra point. Bush, scored again in the second quarter on a 40-yard run and Stewart tallied the third touchdown for State just before the half ended. Rensselaer fought desperately and managed to score a lone touchdown in the final period.

State closed the season with a defeat at the hands of its rival, Tufts, on Alumni Field, 13-0. The Statesmen got into difficulty immediately when Frigard fumbled in the first quarter and Tufts recovered and scored a touchdown. Just before the half closed, Tufts scored again on a line plunge. The play during the second half was furious and hard, but the Maroon and White backs could not penetrate the Jumbo defense.

The work of Captain Lou Bush at halfback, Donald Smith at end, and Paul Shaffner featured the Statesmen's contests during the season. Paul Shaffner, brilliant 165-lb. guard, was elected captain of the 1934 Maroon and White grid forces. Captain Bush was chosen on the all-opponent teams of Tufts, Rhode Island, and St. Anselm's. Donald Smith was honored by Tufts as the best end the Jumbos faced all season, while Paul Shaffner was selected at guard on the all-opponent eleven of St. Anselm's. Bush, Smith, Ryan, Mountain, Sievers, McGuckian, Lojko, Frigard, Burke, Sibson, Griswold, Bigelow are lost by graduation.

VARSITY SOCCER

Despite the fact that they faced the stiffest opposition ever to be encountered by a State College Soccer Team, the State booters came through with flying colors. A record of four wins and three losses against such opposition as Worcester Tech, Trinity, Tufts, Amherst, Dartmouth,, Connecticut State, and Wesleyan is creditable. The Worcester game, as the season's opener, was just another game to the State boys who had little trouble winning by a score 3 to 1. The following week, Trinity set the cocky State booters back on their heels, winning handily by a 3 to 1 score. This defeat by a club they had underrated was the best thing that could have happened to the Briggsmen, for the next week they proceeded to plaster a 4 to 1 defeat upon Tufts and thereafter displayed a determined brand of soccer. The varsity booters lost two heartbreakers to Amherst and Dartmouth by 1 to 0 scores, but not through lack of fight. Then came the Connecticut State Game. In the face of a cold wind, the Briggsmen fought through to a 3 to 2 win against the best club that Connecticut State has yet produced. The Wesleyan game, which closed the season, was a true test of State's ability. On a field covered with three inches of snow, the Maroon and White booters swamped a Wesleyan team which had held Yale to a 0 to 0 tie, by a 4 to 1 score.

The prosaic recording of the team's accomplishments, however, does not give a true picture of the team. Their outstanding characteristic was the fact that they played their best, win or lose. They showed ability to come from behind and win and they capitalized their opportunities to good advantage. Always aggressive, they were quick to anticipate opponents' plays and they played more aggressive soccer than any of their predecessors who bore State's banners.

The team loses seven seniors by graduation, Captain Cowing, Kozlowski, Jackson, MacKimmie, Talbot, Landsman, and Bowler, and the playing of each one deserves special mention. Cowing stood out as one of the best fullbacks in State's history, a sure kicker, a good organizer and a leader who stood up under pressure. His absence next year will be felt greatly. Kozlowski was a clever player who played without grumbling, any position he was asked to, if he thought that by so doing he would help the team. Always seeming to score when we needed it most, he proved a very valuable asset to the team. Bob Jackson rates as the best center forward to date at State and the leading scorer over a period of three years. Jimmy MacKimmie was the lightest man on the team but always the best dribbler on the field. His accurate passes were responsible for many a score. Ed Talbot was prominent as the spark plug of the team. When the going was hard, it was Ed's inspiring yelling that aroused his team-mates to action, and his long boots that enabled the defense to recover. Eli Landsman was an excellent passer. A very fast man, he sized plays up well and worked hard every minute he was in the game. Jerry Bowler was a hard worker who improved each year.

Under the leadership of Captain-Elect Jimmy Blackburn, the team is looking forward to a successful season for 1934.

The 1933 varsity harriers go down on the records as a team that missed a clean slate due to a one-point defeat in one of their five races; but any team that wins four out of five races as did this one, must be ranked as a highly successful outfit.

Dave Caird, the club's leader, was the only letter man to report as the season got underway; but it was apparent to Coach Derby in the opening meet with Tufts, won 22-33, that the Statesmen possessed possibilities. Caird, Stepat and Proctor tied for first honors against the Jumbos, and Dunker and Bishop followed to make the winning margin greater.

St. Stephen's fell next before the Derbymen by a 17-38 score as the team captured five of the first six places. Northeastern was expected to furnish stiff opposition and did not disappoint; but Stepat finally won a duel with Stimpson of the Huskies for first honors, and his teammates finished close enough behind him to eke out a 26-30 victory. Stepat continued to win first place as State met Worcester Tech the following week, but the Engineers ran away with the team score, 27-28. An unfortunate mixup as to finish of the race probably cost M. S. C. a victory.

Gregory of Williams and Stepat ran practically the entire race at Williamstown side by side and finished in a dead heat, although the Statesmen as a team easily walked off with a 19½-35½ win. Dick Hubbard steadily improved as the season progressed and finished in fourth place in this meet.

Captain Caird is the only runner to be lost by graduation. State should have an excellent prospect for next season in Polhemus, captain of the yearling harriers, who finished in third place in the New England Inter-collegiate freshman race.

1934 HOCKEY SEASON

Lack of practice, a scarcity of experienced replacements, the loss of Cain, Hammond and Brown by graduation, and the unfortunate injury of McGuckian, veteran goalie, in the Tech game, which ended his playing career, were the outstanding causes for an unsuccessful ice season, the Maroon and White hockey sextet losing every game on the schedule, for a record of eight consecutive losses.

Although the team did not win a single game, the progress of the Massachusetts State skaters through the season showed a remarkable improvement in every game, and a splendid display of fighting spirit and a refusal to bow without a struggle before stronger opponents.

After a month of winter in which the varsity puckmen were able to find only one day suitable for practice conditions, the Ballmen journeyed to Providence and lost its first game to a powerful Brown sextet, 5-0. Captain Russ Snow continually threatened the Brown goal but could never penetrate far enough into the Bruins defense to score. Mac McGuckian, veteran goalie, played brilliantly and turned in over thirty saves.

Following the defeat in Providence, the hockey team was not able to practice before it journeyed to Boston to lose a hard-fought game to Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 4-2. The Tech game was a costly one for the Maroon and White skaters, for McGuckian received severe injuries and was lost to the varsity for the remainder of the season. In the third period, McGuckian, who had previously made sensational saves, was struck in the face by a puck after a melee in front of the Massachusetts State goal. McGuckian was rushed to a hospital where an examination showed that the Maroon and White goalie had sustained several fractured bones in his face. Valentine, a sophomore, without previous varsity experience, replaced McGuckian, and turned in a creditable performance for the remainder of the game.

In the third contest, the Statesmen were completely swamped by a strong Williams six, 10-1. However, the spirit of the team was not dampened, for the following night in Clinton, N. Y., the Ballmen lost a hard fought game to Hamilton, a team with a better record than Williams. Captain Snow at center, and Henry and Wihry at wings, played brilliantly for the Statesmen.

The Massachusetts State skaters lost the fifth straight of the season when New Hampshire turned back the Statesmen, 6-1. After this stunning defeat the Ballmen journeyed to West Point and played brilliant hockey to lose to the Army sextet, 3-2. After Middlebury had administered another setback to the Ballmen, 4-2, Massachusetts State closed the season by losing to Northeastern, 8-4.

The team will lose by graduation, Captain Snow at center, Ralph Henry at wing, and McGuckian, veteran goalie. Captain Snow led the Maroon and White offense this year in the number of goals scored and played a prominent part in the State attack. Snow and Henry received commendation for their play during the season by the Boston Transcript. The prospects for a successful season next winter are excellent, with many freshmen stars as potential varsity material. Roger Blackburn, husky junior who played a good game at center, will lead the Maroon and White skaters next winter.

BASKETBALL

With four veterans, Bush, Lojko, Frigard, and Nassif as a nucleus, and with Davis a transfer from Purdue, the Stewart brothers — John a sophomore, and Malcolm a senior, Jaworski a sub on last year's team, and McConchie a sophomore, there seemed to be ample material to carry on the season.

The 1934 basketball season started off with a bang as the team under the direction of coach "Mel" Taube defeated Middlebury on the home floor with a score of 35-31.

The Connecticut game was comparatively easy and unimportant except that it was then that the best clicking combination was first discovered — Bush, Stewart, Davis, Lojko, and Jaworski. The score at Connecticut was 37-31. Then came the first of the two games with Amherst. It was a pleasure to watch the smoothly working, yet fast and accurate State team as it turned in a 43-38 score.

After winning from Williams at Williamstown 43-35 in a high scoring game in which Lou Bush made 23 points for the Statesmen, the team had a three weeks lay-off due to a re-arrangement of schedule and exam week.

The first game after the rest was with Rhode Island State in the cage. This was the first of a series of thrillers which followed. After threatening several times during the game, the visitors finally tied our score and sent the game into an overtime period. R. I. scored a field goal. Then Davis got into action with a trio of baskets and with one by Stewart, State won by the score 48-46.

In the second game with Amherst, the visitors were anxious to avenge the previous defeat. It was anybody's game up to the last minute of play when a basket by Lojko gave the Taubemen a 28-27 decision.

Two nights later, we met the University of New Hampshire in the cage and defeated their team by a narrow margin, 34-30.

To complete a busy week the Maroon and White met Brown at Providence on the following night. It was an easy victory giving the Maroon and White a 42-33 victory. In this game, however, Ernie Jaworski received the shoulder injury which affected his shooting the rest of the season.

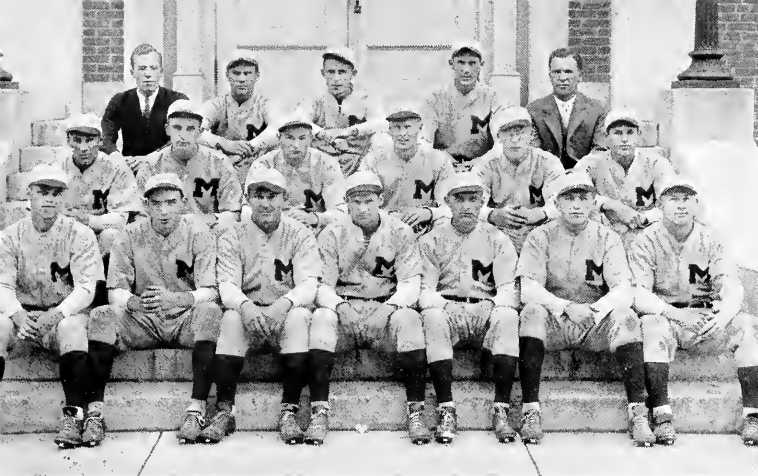

With eight straight victories and four games to go, we were next hosts to a strong New York team, Pratt Institute. In the first half Pratt outscored the Statesmen 24-16, but as they were determined to continue their undefeated record, the Statesmen came back with a high second scoring half and won 40-35.

The Wesleyan game the following day was won easily by a score of 39-31 with Bush again as high scorer.

The Tufts game was easily the most exciting game of the season. Those who were fortunate enough to go to Medford, to see that game, saw the Statesmen come from the short end of a 27-17 score in the last 7 minutes of play, up to a final victory of 29-24.

One game to go for a perfect season. Worcester Tech at Worcester was the final contest. The team worked smoothly and accurately. Beautiful feed passes — Lojko to Bush and brilliant plays by Davis were features of the Tech game, the final score being 43-33.

Twelve straight victories! What a satisfaction for any team! We're glad it could be that way in the last college basketball game for Bush, Lojko, Frigard and Malcolm Stewart. What a satisfaction for the coach of the team! What a remarkable exhibition of sportsmanship, teamwork, and spirit in that championship basketball team.

VARSITY BASEBALL 1933

With a smashing victory over Amherst College before a large Commencement crowd on Alumni Field, 12-0 the Massachusetts State baseball nine completed a season of seven victories and five losses. Other highlights of a successful season were the defeat by the Statesmen of Worcester Tech, 17-1, a 14-4 victory over Springfield, and a decisive win over Northeastern in Boston, 15-5.

At the start of the 1933 diamond season, Coach Mel Taube was faced with the difficult task of finding regular hurlers to take over the duties of John Tikofski and George Cain, two right handers who turned in brilliant mound duty for the Statesmen in the previous season, but who had graduated. Coach Taube finally selected John Kovaleski a senior and a right hander, to assume the role of starting pitcher. Kovaleski was aided during the season by two juniors, Ben Wihry and A. Tikofski, and the three moundsmen turned in some very creditable mound performances for the Maroon and White nine.

After the opening game with Clark had been canceled because of rain, Massachusetts State opened the season with Williams, on Alumni Field. Williams scored four runs in the third inning to assure a victory over the Taubemen, 7-4. The Statesmen pounded out five hits off the delivery of Heermance and Filley while the Williams batters connected for a total of seven hits off three State pitchers. The Maroon and White infield played excellent defensive baseball, committing but two errors against three for Williams.

The Taubemen met a smarting defeat at the hands of a strong Providence College nine in its second game of the season, the Friars making eight hits for seven runs, while the Statesmen garnered but one run and no hits. Massachusetts State scored its only run in the third inning when Farrar walked, was saved at second on an error, and scored when Marion, Providence outfielder, let a wild throw get by him. Lou Bush played a brilliant game at shortstop for the Taubemen, handling eleven chances without an error.

The Maroon and White nine won its first game of the season when the Taubemen pounded out sixteen hits to defeat a weak Worcester Tech team, 17-1. Joe Sheff, centerfielder, and Johnny Consolati, rightfielder, drove out three hits apiece to divide the batting honors for the Statesmen.

Although Connecticut State rallied in the eighth inning to score three runs, the Massachusetts State nine defeated the Nutmeggers on Alumni Field, 5-3. The game was played in a drizzling rain but was witnessed by a large crowd of High School Day guests. Lou Bush, featured for the Taubemen, having three hits in three trips to the plate for a perfect day, and handling six chances without an error at shortstop. Kovaleski, hurled an excellent game for the Taubemen, allowing but six hits.

The Statesmen continued their winning streak to four straight with decisive wins over Springfield and Wesleyan. In the Springfield contest, the Taubemen pounded the opposing hurlers at will, and scored 14 runs to but four for the Maroon nine. Next, the Massachusetts State nine journeyed to Middletown and handed a strong Wesleyan team, an 8-3 setback.

With a record of four wins and two losses, the Taubemen played Amherst at Pratt Field, but were unsuccessful, the Sabrina nine winning, a hard-fought contest, 4-3. Kovaleski, allowed but nine hits to the Amherst batters, while the Statesmen connected for six, two by Farrar, veteran catcher, and two by Zielinski, Maroon and White first sacker. The feature of the game was a homerun by Kovaleski.

In the Tufts contest, the Jumbo athletes pounded Tikofski for ten solid blows, while the Taubemen connected for seven hits off the offerings of Brown, the Jumbos winning, 7-1. Joe Sheff, slugging Maroon and White centerfielder, led the Taubemen with two hits, while Lou Bush, played brilliantly at shortstop.

The Taubemen swung back into the winning streak with victories over Trinity, 4-3, and Northeastern, 15-5. John Kovaleski pitched brilliantly against Trinity and the Statesmen won easily. In the Northeastern contest, Coach Taube used three pitchers and made the game safe by scoring six runs in the second inning. Bush and Farrar led the State attack, the flashy shortstop smashing out three of the team's sixteen hits, while Farrar made two hits and scored three runs. After the Northeastern game, the Taubemen journeyed to New York State and lost a hard-fought game to Union, 5-1.

With the thrilling 18-0 rout of the ancient rival, Amherst, in the final game of the season, played on Alumni Field before a large commencement crowd, the Statesmen closed a successful season, having won seven games and lost five.

SPRING TRACK — 1933

The team won one out of four dual meets. The State team's style was cramped in the first meet with Tufts as Crawford was unable to compete, and events in which he might easily have placed were taken over by Tufts runners, to give the Jumbo a victory by eight points.

M. S. C. lost the services of its captain, Gran Pruyne, the following week in the meet with Worcester Tech when he hit a hurdle and wrenched an ankle that put him out of competition the remainder of the season. As he had started off with a 11-point contribution in the Tufts meet, his absence was keenly felt.

However, there were some bright spots in the season. Although unable to practice regularly, Crawford ran the quarter mile against Connecticut and together with two teammates, swept the event to help his team top the Nutmeggers, 71-64. Another noteworthy performance was that of Greenleaf Chase in the high jump against Tufts when he set a new record of 5 ft. 8¾ in. He also tied for first place at the Eastern Intercollegiate in this event with Kellam of Trinity. Still another outstanding bit was contributed by Stephan who raced through the low hurdles in the meet with Worcester Tech in 27 sec. to tie the record held by Woodworth '23. Murray enjoyed a good season in the half mile, winning this event in three dual meets as well as at the Eastern Intercollegiates. Others who carried on well were Caird in the two mile, Gillette in the mile. Bill Brown in the low hurdles, Cumming in the discus and shot put. Ryan in the pole vault, Guzowski in the hammer, Shaw in the broad jump and Art Brown in the javelin.

Despite the fact that the relay team did not come out ahead in any one of its three races and the indoor track team won but one of its three dual meets, the season was one distinguished by hard work and but for one or two "breaks" that upset calculations, the record might have been somewhat better.

Shaw, Lincoln, Battles and Kerr ran in that order on the relay team and after finishing behind Rhode Island State and Worcester Tech at the K. of C. meet came back to Boston two weeks later and although leading most of the race, lost out to Boston University but defeated Tufts at the B. A. A. meet. State was matched with B. U. and Tufts at the University Club meet the next week and defeated them handily but could not match strides with a fourth opponent, Colby, who was slipped into the race at the last moment. Shaw and Kerr were the outstanding runners of the quartet.

Although the team as a whole showed splendid spirit, the work of Stepat, Kerr and Shaw featured the dual meet schedule. In the first two meets with Boston University and Worcester Tech, Shaw won the 300 and 600 yard runs on each occasion and his time in the "600" against Worcester Tech, 1 min. 21.3 sec., displaced the old record of 1 min. 21.4 sec., held jointly by MacCreedy '23 and Mostrom '16.

Stepat won the mile and 1000 yard run against B. U. and repeated a win in the mile and a second in the "1000" against W. P. I. but his finest performance of the season was reserved for the Connecticut State meet. He lost the mile by the margin of a few inches but the race was the most exciting one of the season. Due to the closeness of the race a fifth of a second was added to the time of the Connecticut winner, Borden, and Stepat were given credit for a new indoor mile record of 4 min. 46.6 sec.

An attack of bronchitis kept Shaw out of the Connecticut meet and his absence without question had much to do with the loss of it, as the visitors swept all places in the "300" and won the "600" as well as taking all places in the broad jump, which is Shaw's best event.

Mention should also be made of the performances of Guenard in the 35 yard dash. He won this event in both the Boston University and Connecticut meets and his time in the latter, 4.2 sec., is a new indoor record at this distance.

The annual R. O. T. C. night ride was held on the evening of May 10, 1933 with twenty-six cadets of the senior class participating. James C. Bulman won the trophy, a cigarette case and a cash award of three dollars by completing the fourteen mile course in the time of one hour, sixteen minutes and forty-five seconds. Seymour B. Scott, riding Lucella, finished in second place ten minutes after Bulman, and was followed by cadets Hodsdon and LeClair in third and fourth places respectively.

Beginning at nine o'clock, the cadets left in pairs, each cadet going in the opposite direction until all of the twenty-six had left the starting point. Maps and sealed orders were given each rider, and each was permitted to use a flash light and a compass. The officers were on their honor not to move at a faster rate than a trot, and the horses were examined the next morning before the winners were announced.

M. S. C. HORSE SHOW

The twelfth annual Massachusetts State College Horse Show was held at the riding park on Saturday, May 27, 1933, at 2 p. m. The 1933 horse show was one of the largest and most successful that has been staged on the campus. One hundred and twenty-five horses were entered in the eleven classes, and nearly fifteen hundred spectators were present.

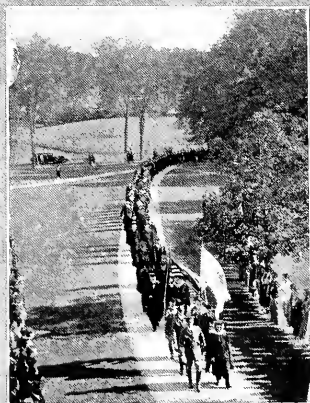

At the beginning of the show, the Stowell Cup was awarded to Cadet Sergeant Douglas C. Daniels, who was selected as the junior who had shown the greatest improvement in horsemanship during the year, The Hughes Cup, awarded by Captain Dwight Hughes, Jr. to the cadet who has shown the most interest in riding during the year, was awarded to Cadet Lieutenant Charles A. LeClair for the second consecutive year.

In the student classes, the R. O. T. C. Trophy, awarded by Colonel C. A. Romeyn for skill in horsemanship, was won by Cadet Henry Walker. The Thompson Trophy for coed riding was won by Janice Munson of the class of 1933. The Watkins Trophy for saddle horse pairs was won by Marian Mc Laughlin and Cadet James Bulman. The President's Trophy, presented by President Hugh P. Baker for senior cadet jumping, was awarded to Francis Trow.

The 1933 Horse Show was given under the auspices of the military department, and Captain Dwight Hughes, Jr. was in charge. The jumping classes were judged by Colonel W. J. Collins of Northampton, the saddle classes by Roger Rouque of Greenfield, and the student classes by Colonel Romeyn.

THE INAUGURATION OF HUGH POTTER BAKER

On the beautiful autumn afternoon of October ninth a colorful parade made its way from the Memorial Building to Stockbridge Hall. It was the inaugural procession for Hugh Potter Baker who was about to be installed as eleventh president of Massachusetts State College. The procession was led by the Marshal, Colonel Romeyn, and the Committee Chairman, Dean Machmer. Behind them came the military aides with the colors of the United States and of the state of Massachusetts. Next came Dr. Baker with Governor Ely, Commissioner Graves of the New York Department of Education with Commissioner Smith of the Massachusetts Department of Education, Alvan S. Ryan of the class of 1934 with Reverend J. Paul Williams, and Dr. Thatcher, retiring president, with Dr. Ellis. The next groups were the trustees of the college, the faculty, the delegates from other colleges, the senior class, and finally the representatives from academic bodies, fraternities, and sororities. The members of the entire procession took their places with other invited guests in Bowker Auditorium where the formal ceremony was held.

The inauguration program opened with an invocation by Reverend J. Paul Williams. Governor Ely then presented to Dr. Baker the charter of the college with his pledge, as governor of the state of Massachusetts, of the support of the Commonwealth to the new administration. Addresses of greeting were delivered by Commissioner Graves on behalf of the delegates, by Commissioner Smith for the State Department of Education, and by Alvan S. Ryan in behalf of the undergraduate body of the college. Following the singing of a hymn by the entire gathering, President Baker delivered his inaugural address. He spoke with appreciation of the history of the college and of hopes for the future. The benediction and organ recessional concluded the ceremony.

Directly after the exercises in Bowker Auditorium a reception was held at the President's House. President and Mrs. Baker welcomed the distinguished visitors, representatives, and delegates who were present from other colleges and those who represented various groups on our own campus and had come to do honor to the new president of Massachusetts State College.

That evening a formal banquet was held in Draper Hall. Although it was not as serious, nevertheless it was a memorable part of the day's ceremonies. The toastmaster, Philip Whitmore of the class of 1915, cleverly presented the banquet as a wedding feast in honor of President Baker, whom he referred to as the bride, and the college — the groom. Along this pattern he presented the speakers and events of the evening. Among the speakers was President Lewis of the University of New Hampshire, formerly president of Massachusetts State. Other speakers were President Stanley King of Amherst who spoke on the long association of the two colleges of the town of Amherst, Mrs. Lottie A. Leach, President John Albert Cousins of Tufts, and Frank Prentice Rand, Professor of English at our own college. The guests were also delighted with two beautiful piano selections rendered by Mrs. Grete von Bayer. Many were the congratulations which the "bride" and "groom" received during the course of the evening.

The list of delegates to these inaugural ceremonies was truly an impressive one; the college was indeed honored by many distinguished guests. There were representatives from seventy-eight colleges of all parts of the country, of these, twenty-five were presidents and twenty-one more were members of the faculty. Thus it was, that, surrounded by all these prominent guests and in the midst of the autumn splendor of a beautiful campus, the eleventh president of Massachusetts State College was inaugurated.

GRATES

Alma Mater — for this I give thee thanks:
You gave to me the vision of a star,
A glowing star by which to guide my life,
To keep me ever striving up and up,
A shining goal that I may never reach,
So far it gleams above my earthly path.
It is a vision which will hold me true
Though I am crushed and broken,
A vision that will make more splendid still
The truth and beauty of the life-to-come,
And will, I hope, create within my soul
Emotion, deep and pure, for those I love.
